GNU LESSER GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE

Version 2.1, February 1999
Copyright (C) 1991, 1999 Free Software Foundation, Inc.
51 Franklin St, Fifth Floor, Boston, MA 02110-1301 USA
Everyone is permitted to copy and distribute verbatim copies of this license document, but changing it is not allowed.

This is the first released version of the Lesser GPL. It also counts as the license of the GNU Library Public License, version 2, hence the version number 2.1.

Preamble

The licenses for most software are designed to make sure you have the freedom to share and change it. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to guarantee your freedom to share and change free software to make it do what you wish for all your users.

This license, the Lesser General Public License, applies to some programs which are designed to be used by several programs. The GNU General Public License is more liberal, allowing you to copy, modify, and redistribute your copy of the program, but you must not combine it with other free software.

When we speak of free software, we are referring to freedom of use, not price. Our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of free software (and charge for them if you wish), that you can offer warranty for them, and that you can get it in any form you prefer; and that you are informed that you can do so.

To protect your rights, we need to make restrictions that forbid distributors to deny you these rights or to deny you the ability to exercise these rights. These restrictions translate to certain responsibilities for you if you distribute copies of the library or if you modify it.

For example, if you distribute copies of the library, whether gratis or for a fee, you must also distribute all the source code for that library. You must make sure that they, too, receive or can get the source code. If you link other code with the library, you must provide complete object files to the recipients, so that they can relink them with the library after making changes to the library and recompiling it. And you must show them these terms so they know their rights.

We protect your rights with two steps: (1) we copyright the library, and (2) we offer you this license, which gives you legal rights to distribute copies of the library.

To protect each distributor, we want to make it very clear that there is no warranty for the library. Also, if the library is modified by someone else and passed on, the recipients should know that they have no warranty, and that the original author is not liable. However, if the program is modified by someone else and passed on, the recipients should know that they have no warranty, and that the original author is not liable.

Finally, software patents pose a constant threat to the existence of any free program. We wish to make sure that a company cannot exploit its patent rights to restrict the freedom of users of the library. Therefore, we want to avoid patents being a barrier to the distribution of the library.

Most GNU software, including some libraries, is covered by the GNU General Public License. This license, the GNU Lesser General Public License, is more liberal, allowing you to copy, modify, and redistribute your copy of the program, but you must not combine it with other free software.

When a program is linked with a library, whether statically or using a shared library, the combination of the two is legally speaking a combined work, a derivative of the original library. The GNU General Public License therefore permits such linking only if the entire combination fits its criteria of freedom. The Lesser General Public License permits more lax criteria for linking other code with the library.

We call this license the "Lesser" General Public License because it does less to protect the user's freedom than the ordinary General Public License. It also permits certain kinds of copying to be done as an advantage over copying non-free programs. These disadvantages are: (1) you cannot sue for patent infringement; and (2) you cannot sue for trademark infringement. The Lesser General Public License for many special circumstances.

For example, on rare occasions, there may be a special need to encourage the widest possible use of a certain library, to speed its upstart in the market. For example, the library may form part of an operating system or the kernel of a computer system. In such cases, there may be a good reason to permit people to use non-GPL linked versions of the library, even to distribute copies of such non-GPL versions of the library.

It is our strong preference that any patents or trademark issues be handled by the copyright holder of the library, not by distributing copies of the library. However, if the program is modified by someone else and passed on, the recipients should know that they have no warranty, and that the original author is not liable.

Ordinary GNU General Public License has appeared, then you can specify that version instead if you wish.) Do not make any other change in these notices.

Do not change this notice in a derived work, if it is unreasonable for that notice to be in the derived work. But you must add the notice to all subsequent copies and distributions made from this copy.

This notice is useful when you wish to copy part of the code of the Library into a program that is not a library.

4. The new copy and distribute the library (or a portion or derivative of it) under Section 3) or object code or executable form under the terms of Section 3 and 4, and make provisions that your subsequent users can redistribute under the terms of Sections 1 and 2 above as a matter of convenience, if you wish.

If distribution of object code is made by offering access to copy the source code from the same place, you may satisfy the requirements to distribute the source code, even though third parties are not expected to copy the source code with the object code.

5. A program that contains no derivation of any portion of the library may be designed to work with the library by being compiled or linked with it, in a file called a "work that uses the library". Such a work, in addition to the library, may be distributed under the terms of this license. However, linking a "work that uses the library" with the library does not constitute a derivation of any portion of the library, and therefore does not require you to make any of the provisions of Sections 1 and 2 above.

However, linking a "work that uses the library" with the library does constitute a derivation of any portion of the library, and therefore does require you to make any of the provisions of Sections 1 and 2 above.

When a work that uses the library uses material from a header file that is part of the library, the object code for the work may be a derivative of the library even though the source code is not. Whether this is true is dependent on the details of the work and is left to the discretion of the copyright holder. If the work is itself a library, the provisions for this to be true are not precisely defined in the license.

If such an object file uses only numerical parameters, data structure layouts and accessors, and small macros and small inline functions (ten lines or less in length), then the use of the object file is quantitative, regardless of whether it is linked. A derivative library will still fall under Section 4.)

However, if the work is a derivative of the library, you may distribute the object code for the work under the terms of Section 6, for example, even though the work itself falls under Section 4.)

6. As an exception to the Sections above, you may also combine or link a "work that uses the library" with the library to produce a work containing portions of the library, and distribute that work under the terms of this license, if you make the following modifications:

a) Accompany the work with the complete corresponding machine-readable source code for the library distributed under Sections 1 and 2 above; and, if the work is an executable linked with the library, with the complete machine-readable "work that uses the library" as well as the source code for the library. You must also accompany the work with the complete corresponding machine-readable source code for the library, if it is understood that the user who changes the contents of the machine-readable files in the work will not necessarily be able to recompile the application and relink it with the library.

b) Use a suitable shared library mechanism for linking with a copy of the library already present on the user's computer system, rather than copying private copies into the executable and linking with those private copies. In particular, it is sufficient to use standard platform specific linker flags to cause the linker to locate the library in the user's installation, so long as the linker can identify the library in the archive without its aid and is able to recompile and relink the application with the archive if it is used.

c) Accompany the work with a written offer, valid for at least three years, to give the user one or more copies of the source code for the library, if they request it. This offer must be made in a form that is convenient for making and distributing the library. For example, if you distribute the work on a CD-ROM, you must include a CD-ROM with the source code for the library, and you must also include a written offer to give the user one or more copies of the source code for the library, if they request it.

d) If distribution of the work is made by offering access to copy the source code, offer equivalent access to copy the machine-readable form of the source code, if you have it.

e) If you have not done so, you must also include a copy of the source code for the library, if you have it, in a form that is convenient for making and distributing the library.

f) If you have not done so, you must also include a copy of the source code for the library, if you have it, in a form that is convenient for making and distributing the library.

g) If you have not done so, you must also include a copy of the source code for the library, if you have it, in a form that is convenient for making and distributing the library.

GNU GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE

TERMS AND CONDITIONS FOR COPYING, DISTRIBUTION AND MODIFICATION

0. This license applies to any program or other work which contains a notice placed by the copyright holder stating it may be distributed under the terms of this license. The license applies to the program as a whole, and to any part of it that is copied, modified, or transmitted, in whole or in part, by any means, electronic or mechanical, including photocopying, recording, or by any information storage and retrieval system, and to any work derived from the program, in whole or in part, by any means, electronic or mechanical, including photocopying, recording, or by any information storage and retrieval system, and to any work derived from the program, in whole or in part, by any means, electronic or mechanical, including photocopying, recording, or by any information storage and retrieval system.

Activities other than copying, distribution and modification are not restricted, and the license from the Program is not affected by the fact that the Program is not licensed, and the license from the Program is not affected by the fact that the Program is not licensed, and the license from the Program is not affected by the fact that the Program is not licensed.

1. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the Program's source code as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you preserve all copyright notices and disclaimers of warranty; keep intact all the notices that refer to this license and to the absence of any warranty; and you make other recipients of the Program a party to this license along with the Program.

2. You may modify your copy or copies of the Program or any portion of it, thus creating a work based on the Program, and copy and distribute such modifications or your creations to the extent permitted by section 1 above, provided that you also meet all of these conditions:

a) You must cause the modified files to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.

b) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, to be licensed under the same license that the original work was licensed under. If the work is part of a larger work, you must cause any work that you distribute or publish, to be licensed under the same license that the original work was licensed under.

c) If the work is derived from a program that is licensed under the GNU General Public License, you must cause any work that you distribute or publish, to be licensed under the GNU General Public License, unless it is licensed under the GNU General Public License or a later version of the GNU General Public License, in which case you may choose to license the work under the GNU General Public License or a later version of the GNU General Public License.

These requirements apply to the modified work as a whole. If the work is derived from the Program, you must also cause any work that you distribute or publish, to be licensed under the same license that the original work was licensed under.

3. You may copy and distribute the Program for a charge not more than the cost of physically preparing source distributions, in any medium, provided that you also meet all of these conditions:

a) You must copy and distribute the Program for a charge not more than the cost of physically preparing source distributions, in any medium, provided that you also meet all of these conditions.

b) You must copy and distribute the Program for a charge not more than the cost of physically preparing source distributions, in any medium, provided that you also meet all of these conditions.

c) You must copy and distribute the Program for a charge not more than the cost of physically preparing source distributions, in any medium, provided that you also meet all of these conditions.

d) You must copy and distribute the Program for a charge not more than the cost of physically preparing source distributions, in any medium, provided that you also meet all of these conditions.

Also send information on how to contact you by electronic and paper mail.

If the program is interactive, you must ensure a certain notice like this when it starts in an interactive mode:

GNU Emacs version 24. Copyright (C) 1989-2011 Free Software Foundation, Inc. Copying and distribution are permitted by the GNU General Public License. This is Free Software; you are welcome to redistribute it under certain conditions. Type 'show' for details.

The noninteractive command 'show' or 'show-' should show the appropriate parts of the GNU General Public License. If possible, you should use any way to avoid scrolling other than 'show' or 'show-'. It should be possible to type 'show' or 'show-' to get the full text.

You should also get your employer (if you work as a programmer) or your school, if you are a student, to authorize its computers for the program, if necessary. Here is a sample authorization for the program:

Programmer: Inc. hereby authorizes all computers connected to the program 'Emacs' (which takes passes at computers) written by David Huxley, to copy, distribute and modify the program under the GNU General Public License.

Signature of D. Huxley, 1 April 1989
D. Huxley, President of Inc.

This General Public License does not permit incorporating your program into proprietary programs. If your program is a subprogram of a proprietary program, you must use the GNU General Public License to distribute that subprogram. It is your responsibility to contact the copyright holder of the proprietary program to get permission to use the GNU General Public License to distribute your subprogram.

Preamble

The licenses for most software are designed to make sure you give the freedom to share and change it. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to ensure your freedom to share and change free software. You may freely copy, distribute, and modify software under the GNU General Public License provided you are comfortable with the terms. You may be more concerned about protecting your copyrights than yours. (Some other Free Software Foundation software is covered by the GNU Lesser General Public License instead.) You can apply it to your programs, too.

When we speak of free software, we are referring to freedom, not price. Our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of free software and charge for this service. For example, you can charge a fee to others to help them do it, or you can charge a fee for the software itself, or you can charge a fee for the documentation. You can also charge a fee for services you provide for the software, or for the documentation, or for the hardware on which the software runs, or for the support you provide for the software.

To protect your rights, we have added provisions to the license that protect you against copyright trolls who sue you for using the software, or for the documentation, or for the hardware on which the software runs, or for the support you provide for the software. If the software is modified by someone else and passed on, we want to make sure that they, too, receive the same rights that you do. You must make sure that they, too, receive the same rights that you do. And you must also make sure that they, too, know their rights.

For example, if you distribute copies of such a program, whether gratis or for a fee, you must give the recipients all the rights that you have. You must make sure that they, too, receive the same rights that you do. You must also make sure that they, too, know their rights. You must also make sure that they, too, know their rights.

We protect your rights by making certain that anyone who distributes copies of the program must give you the same rights that you have. You must make sure that they, too, receive the same rights that you do. You must also make sure that they, too, know their rights. You must also make sure that they, too, know their rights.

Finally, we want to make it clear that any patent must be licensed for everyone's free use or not licensed at all. The precise terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification follow.

GNU GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE

TERMS AND CONDITIONS FOR COPYING, DISTRIBUTION AND MODIFICATION

0. This license applies to any program or other work which contains a notice placed by the copyright holder stating it is licensed under the terms of the GNU General Public License. The "Program" below refers to any such program or work, and a "work based on the Program" is any work that uses the Program or any derivative of it. Each licensee is addressed as "you".

Activities other than copying, distribution and modification are not covered by this license. They are outside its scope. The act of copying is covered only if it is done for the purpose of creating a copy for your own use, or for the purpose of creating a copy for the use of others. The precise terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification follow.

1. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the Program's source code as you see fit, subject to the requirements specified in section 2, provided that you copy the full copyright notice and disclaimer of warranty to all copies you make. You must also make sure that they, too, receive the same rights that you do. You must also make sure that they, too, know their rights.

2. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may also charge a fee for other services you provide for the Program. You may also charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may also charge a fee for other services you provide for the Program.

3. You may modify your copy or copies of the Program or any portion thereof, provided you meet the following conditions:

a) You must cause the modified files to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.

b) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part is based on the Program, to be licensed under the same GNU General Public License that licenses the Program, and you must cause the work to carry prominent notices of this license. You must also make sure that they, too, receive the same rights that you do. You must also make sure that they, too, know their rights.

c) If the modified program normally makes commands interactively available to the user, you must also make the modified program available in source code form. You must also make sure that they, too, receive the same rights that you do. You must also make sure that they, too, know their rights.

d) If the modified program normally makes commands interactively available to the user, you must also make the modified program available in source code form. You must also make sure that they, too, receive the same rights that you do. You must also make sure that they, too, know their rights.

e) If the modified program normally makes commands interactively available to the user, you must also make the modified program available in source code form. You must also make sure that they, too, receive the same rights that you do. You must also make sure that they, too, know their rights.

f) If the modified program normally makes commands interactively available to the user, you must also make the modified program available in source code form. You must also make sure that they, too, receive the same rights that you do. You must also make sure that they, too, know their rights.

g) If the modified program normally makes commands interactively available to the user, you must also make the modified program available in source code form. You must also make sure that they, too, receive the same rights that you do. You must also make sure that they, too, know their rights.

h) If the modified program normally makes commands interactively available to the user, you must also make the modified program available in source code form. You must also make sure that they, too, receive the same rights that you do. You must also make sure that they, too, know their rights.

i) If the modified program normally makes commands interactively available to the user, you must also make the modified program available in source code form. You must also make sure that they, too, receive the same rights that you do. You must also make sure that they, too, know their rights.

j) If the modified program normally makes commands interactively available to the user, you must also make the modified program available in source code form. You must also make sure that they, too, receive the same rights that you do. You must also make sure that they, too, know their rights.

k) If the modified program normally makes commands interactively available to the user, you must also make the modified program available in source code form. You must also make sure that they, too, receive the same rights that you do. You must also make sure that they, too, know their rights.

l) If the modified program normally makes commands interactively available to the user, you must also make the modified program available in source code form. You must also make sure that they, too, receive the same rights that you do. You must also make sure that they, too, know their rights.

END OF TERMS AND CONDITIONS

How to Apply These Terms to Your New Program

If you develop a new program, and you want it to be of the greatest possible use to the public, the best way to achieve this is to make it free software which everyone can redistribute and change under various terms. To do so, attach the following notices to the program. It is safest to attach them to the start of each source file to most effectively enforce the "copyright" line and a pointer to where the full notice is found.

One line to give the program's name and a brief idea of what it does:
Copyright (C) 1989, name of author

This program is free software; it is licensed under the GNU General Public License. It is licensed to you under the terms of the GNU General Public License as published by the Free Software Foundation, either version 2 of the License, or (at your option) any later version.

This program is distributed in the hope that it will be useful, but WITHOUT ANY WARRANTY; without even the implied warranty of MERCHANTABILITY or FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE. See the GNU General Public License for more details.

You should have received a copy of the GNU General Public License along with this program. If not, write to the Free Software Foundation, Inc., 59 Temple Place, Suite 330, Boston, MA 02111-1307 USA.

Also add information on how to contact you by electronic and paper mail.

If the program is interactive, make it output a short notice like this when it starts up in interactive mode:

Copyright (C) 1989, name of author
This is free software; you are welcome to redistribute it under certain conditions; type 'show c' for details.

The hypothetical command 'show c' should show the appropriate parts of the General Public License. Of course, the command should use the same-calls or new-lines-whatever suits your program.

You should also get your reader (or the work as a program) or your manual, if any, to sign a "copyright disclaimer" for the program, if available. Here is a sample for the former:

Yodanis, Inc. hereby disclaims all copyright interest in the program 'Commodore' (which means anyone can compile) written by James Hower.
signature of J. Hower, 1 April 1989

This General Public License does not permit incorporating your program into proprietary programs. If your program is a derivative work, you may consider it more useful to permit linking proprietary applications with the library. It is less clear what to do, use the old Library General Public License instead of this License.

GNU GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE

Version 2, June 1991
Copyright (C) 1989, 1991 Free Software Foundation, Inc.
59 Temple Place, Suite 330, Boston, MA 02111-1307 USA
Everyone is permitted to copy and distribute verbatim copies of this license document, but changing it is not allowed.

Preamble

The licenses for most software are designed to make sure you are free to share and change it. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to guarantee your freedom to share and change free software--to make sure the program is free for all users of the program. It is the purpose of this license to make sure it is not used to restrict users of a program. It is not the purpose of this license to make sure the program is free for all users of the program. It is not the purpose of this license to make sure the program is free for all users of the program.

When we speak of free software, we are referring to freedom, not price. Our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of free software (and charge for this service if you wish), that you receive source code as well as the object code if you wish, that you can change the software and be credited for those changes, and that you know you can do these things.

To protect the rights of those who share and/or receive copies of the software, we have written this license. You may modify it.

For example, if you distribute copies of such a program, whether gratis or for a fee, you must give the recipients all the rights that you have. You must make sure that they, too, receive or can get a copy of each copy of the software, and that you know you can do these things.

We protect your rights with two simple methods: by making the source code of the program available and by putting permission to copy in the source code. And you must show these things to those who receive copies of the program.

Also, for each author's protection and ours, we want to make certain the copyright is recognized, and that you and any copyright holder be notified of any modifications that have been made to the program, so that you and any copyright holder be notified of any modifications that have been made to the program.

Finally, our license is designed to be simple, and not to interfere with your ability to protect your trademark. We want to make certain that anyone who distributes our software must be notified of any modifications that have been made to the program.

The precise terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification follow.

GNU GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE

TERMS AND CONDITIONS FOR COPYING, DISTRIBUTION AND MODIFICATION

0. This license applies to any program or other work which contains a notice placed by the copyright holder stating it is licensed under the terms of this license. The Program, however, is any such program or work, and a work based on the Program is any such program or work which contains or is derived from the Program in any form, and which is not itself licensed under the terms of this license. Each licensee is addressed as "you". Activities under this license are considered to be those of the licensee as a person, not as an organization or other legal entity, unless the Program itself indicates otherwise. This license does not apply to any other work which is not licensed under the terms of this license.

1. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the Program's source code, as you receive it, in any medium, provided you display prominently the copyright notice and this license with the Program; you must also include a copy of this license with each copy of the Program.

2. You may modify your copy or copies of the Program or any portion thereof, to suit your needs and purposes, and to distribute copies of the modified program to others, provided that you do so under the terms of this license. You may charge a fee for such copying and distribution.

3. You may copy and distribute copies of the Program or any portion thereof, provided that you do so under the terms of this license. You may charge a fee for such copying and distribution.

4. You may copy and distribute copies of the Program or any portion thereof, provided that you do so under the terms of this license. You may charge a fee for such copying and distribution.

5. You may copy and distribute copies of the Program or any portion thereof, provided that you do so under the terms of this license. You may charge a fee for such copying and distribution.

6. You may copy and distribute copies of the Program or any portion thereof, provided that you do so under the terms of this license. You may charge a fee for such copying and distribution.

7. You may copy and distribute copies of the Program or any portion thereof, provided that you do so under the terms of this license. You may charge a fee for such copying and distribution.

8. You may copy and distribute copies of the Program or any portion thereof, provided that you do so under the terms of this license. You may charge a fee for such copying and distribution.

9. You may copy and distribute copies of the Program or any portion thereof, provided that you do so under the terms of this license. You may charge a fee for such copying and distribution.

10. You may copy and distribute copies of the Program or any portion thereof, provided that you do so under the terms of this license. You may charge a fee for such copying and distribution.

11. You may copy and distribute copies of the Program or any portion thereof, provided that you do so under the terms of this license. You may charge a fee for such copying and distribution.

12. You may copy and distribute copies of the Program or any portion thereof, provided that you do so under the terms of this license. You may charge a fee for such copying and distribution.

13. You may copy and distribute copies of the Program or any portion thereof, provided that you do so under the terms of this license. You may charge a fee for such copying and distribution.

14. You may copy and distribute copies of the Program or any portion thereof, provided that you do so under the terms of this license. You may charge a fee for such copying and distribution.

15. You may copy and distribute copies of the Program or any portion thereof, provided that you do so under the terms of this license. You may charge a fee for such copying and distribution.

16. You may copy and distribute copies of the Program or any portion thereof, provided that you do so under the terms of this license. You may charge a fee for such copying and distribution.

17. You may copy and distribute copies of the Program or any portion thereof, provided that you do so under the terms of this license. You may charge a fee for such copying and distribution.

18. You may copy and distribute copies of the Program or any portion thereof, provided that you do so under the terms of this license. You may charge a fee for such copying and distribution.

19. You may copy and distribute copies of the Program or any portion thereof, provided that you do so under the terms of this license. You may charge a fee for such copying and distribution.

20. You may copy and distribute copies of the Program or any portion thereof, provided that you do so under the terms of this license. You may charge a fee for such copying and distribution.

21. You may copy and distribute copies of the Program or any portion thereof, provided that you do so under the terms of this license. You may charge a fee for such copying and distribution.

If you develop a new program, and you want it to be of the greatest possible use to the public, the best way to achieve this is to make it free software which everyone can redistribute and change under these terms.

To do so, attach the following notices to the program. It is safest to attach them to the start of each source file to most effectively ensure the notices are always present. You should also add the "copyright" line and a pointer to where the full notice is found.

Copyright (C) 1989  name of author
This program is free software; you can redistribute it under certain conditions. See the GNU General Public License for more details.
(All your copies must contain this notice.)

This program is distributed in the hope that it will be useful, but WITHOUT ANY WARRANTY; without even the implied warranty of MERCHANTABILITY or FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE. See the GNU General Public License for more details.

You should have received a copy of the GNU General Public License along with this program. If not, write to the Free Software Foundation, Inc., 51 Franklin Street, Fifth Floor, Boston, MA 02110-1301 USA

Also add information on how to contact you by electronic and paper mail.

If the program is interactive, make it output a short notice like this when it starts in an interactive mode:

Copyright (C) 1989  name of author
This program is free software; you can redistribute it under certain conditions. See the GNU General Public License for more details.
(All your copies must contain this notice.)

The hypothetical commands "show w" and "show n" should be the appropriate parts of the GNU General Public License. Of course, the commands you use may vary, but they should show what the license is. They could show some other lines of the license, whatever suits your program.

You should also get your employer (if you work as an employee) or your school, if any, to sign a "copyright disclaimer" for the program. If you do not wish to do this, you may include the following text instead:

I, the copyright holder, hereby disclaims all copyright interest in the program
'GNU Emacs', which makes names of contributors uncopyrightable by James Kilgore, 19 April 1989

This General Public License does not permit incorporating your program into proprietary programs. If your program is a derivative library, you may consider it more useful to permit linking proprietary applications with the library. If this is other your wish, use the GNU Library General Public License instead of this License.

Version 3, 29 June 2007

Copyright (C) 2007 Free Software Foundation, Inc. <http://fsf.org/>
Everyone is permitted to copy and distribute verbatim copies of this license document, but changing it is not allowed.

This version of the GNU Lesser General Public License incorporates the terms and conditions of version 3 of the GNU General Public License, with the addition of the permissions listed below.

8. Additional Definitions.

As used herein, "this License" refers to version 3 of the GNU Lesser General Public License, and the "GNU GPL" refers to version 3 of the GNU General Public License.

"The Library" refers to a covered work approved by this License, other than an Application or a Combined Work as defined below.

An "Application" is any work that makes use of an interface provided by the Library, but which is not otherwise based on the Library. Defining a subclass of a class defined by the Library is deemed a form of using an interface provided by the Library.

A "Combined Work" is a work produced by combining or linking an Application with the Library. The particular version of the Library with which the Combined Work was made is also called the "Linked Version".

The "Minimal Corresponding Source" for a Combined Work means the Corresponding Source for the Combined Work, plus any source code for portions of the Combined Work that, considered in isolation, are based on the Application, and not on the Linked Version.

The "Corresponding Application Code" for a Combined Work means the object code and/or source code for the Application, including any data and utility programs needed for reproducing the Combined Work from the Application, but excluding the Minimal Corresponding Source and the Library.

1. Exception to Section 3 of the GNU GPL.

You may convey a covered work under sections 1 and 4 of this License without being bound by section 3 of the GNU GPL.

2. Conveying Modified Versions.

If you modify a copy of the Library, and in your modifications, a portion of the Library is replaced by the modified portion, you may convey the modified portion as a separate file. The modified portion must accompany the Library as a separate file.

3. Copying and Distribution.

a) Under the GNU GPL, with one of the additional permissions of this license applicable to that copy.

b) Subject Code Incorporating Material from Library Header Files.

The object code form of an Application may incorporate material from a header file that is part of the Library. You may use such material under the terms of your choice, provided that you include in the relevant source code the appropriate copyright notice and any other notices which accompany such material in the original form. You must include in the relevant source code the appropriate copyright notice and any other notices which accompany such material in the original form.

c) Accompany the object code with a copy of the GNU GPL and this license document.

d) Accompany the object code with a copy of the GNU GPL and this license document.

e) For a Combined Work that displays copyright notices during execution, include the copyright notice for the Library and the copyright notice for the Application in the same form as the copyright notice for the Library and the copyright notice for the Application.

f) Do one of the following:

- 1) Use a suitable shared library mechanism for linking with the Library, a suitable shared library mechanism for linking with the Library, a suitable shared library mechanism for linking with the Library, and the Corresponding Application Code in a form suitable for use with the Library, or
- 2) Use a suitable shared library mechanism for linking with the Library, a suitable shared library mechanism for linking with the Library, and the Corresponding Application Code in a form suitable for use with the Library, or
- 3) Use a suitable shared library mechanism for linking with the Library, a suitable shared library mechanism for linking with the Library, and the Corresponding Application Code in a form suitable for use with the Library, or
- 4) Use a suitable shared library mechanism for linking with the Library, a suitable shared library mechanism for linking with the Library, and the Corresponding Application Code in a form suitable for use with the Library, or

g) Use a suitable shared library mechanism for linking with the Library, a suitable shared library mechanism for linking with the Library, and the Corresponding Application Code in a form suitable for use with the Library, or

h) Use a suitable shared library mechanism for linking with the Library, a suitable shared library mechanism for linking with the Library, and the Corresponding Application Code in a form suitable for use with the Library, or

4. Combined Works.

You may convey a Combined Work under terms of your choice that, taken together, effectively do not restrict modification of the portions of the Library contained in the Combined Work and reverse engineering for debugging such modifications, if you also do each of the following:

- a) Accompany the Combined Work with a copy of the GNU GPL and this license document.
- b) Accompany the Combined Work with a copy of the GNU GPL and this license document.
- c) For a Combined Work that displays copyright notices during execution, include the copyright notice for the Library and the copyright notice for the Application in the same form as the copyright notice for the Library and the copyright notice for the Application.
- d) Do one of the following:

- 1) Use a suitable shared library mechanism for linking with the Library, a suitable shared library mechanism for linking with the Library, and the Corresponding Application Code in a form suitable for use with the Library, or
- 2) Use a suitable shared library mechanism for linking with the Library, a suitable shared library mechanism for linking with the Library, and the Corresponding Application Code in a form suitable for use with the Library, or
- 3) Use a suitable shared library mechanism for linking with the Library, a suitable shared library mechanism for linking with the Library, and the Corresponding Application Code in a form suitable for use with the Library, or
- 4) Use a suitable shared library mechanism for linking with the Library, a suitable shared library mechanism for linking with the Library, and the Corresponding Application Code in a form suitable for use with the Library, or

5. Combined Libraries.

You may place library facilities that are a work based on the Library into a separate library program with other library facilities that use the Library and are covered by this license, provided that you accompany such a combined library with a copy of the GNU GPL and this license document.

- a) Accompany the combined library with a copy of the same work based on the Library, accompanied with the other library facilities, conveyed under the terms of this license.
- b) Accompany the combined library with a copy of the same work based on the Library, accompanied with the other library facilities, conveyed under the terms of this license.

6. Revised Versions of the GNU Lesser General Public License.

The Free Software Foundation may publish revised and/or new versions of the GNU Lesser General Public License from time to time. Such new versions will be similar in spirit to the present version, but may differ in detail to address new problems or concerns.

Each version is given a distinguishing version number. If the Library as you received it specifies that a certain numbered version of the GNU Lesser General Public License "or any later version" applies to it, you have the option of following the terms and conditions either of that numbered version or of any later version published by the Free Software Foundation. If the Library as you received it specifies that a certain numbered version of the GNU Lesser General Public License "or the GNU Lesser General Public License" applies to it, you must follow the terms and conditions of the GNU Lesser General Public License as published by the Free Software Foundation.

If the Library as you received it specifies that a proxy can decide whether future versions of the GNU Lesser General Public License shall apply, the proxy's public statement of acceptance of any version is binding on the licensee in the absence of a more restrictive public statement of acceptance by the licensee.

The GNU General Public License is a free, copyleft license for software and other kinds of works.

The licenses for most software and other practical works are designed to allow you to share and improve the work. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to ensure that you have the right to share and improve any work you create based on the software. In the GNU General Public License you have the freedom to copy and distribute the work as you wish, for any purpose, in any medium, provided you keep the same copyright for any other works you derived from this work.

When you share a work, you owe it to the community to allow them to do so too. By providing this license, you agree that you will make all your source code available at no charge to anyone who asks for it. This is the only way you can ensure that the most common version of your work is shared with the most common version of the software.

Each version is given a distinguishing version number. If the Library as you received it specifies that a certain numbered version of the GNU General Public License "or any later version" applies to it, you have the option of following the terms and conditions either of that numbered version or of any later version published by the Free Software Foundation. 1. Grant of Additional Permission.

You have the freedom to copy and distribute copies of the program, for any purpose, in any medium, provided you keep the same copyright for any other works you derived from this work.

2. No Weakening of GPL Copyleft.

The availability of this Exception does not imply any general reservation that this copyleft software is restricted by the copyleft requirements of the license of the GPL.

You have the freedom to copy and distribute copies of the program, for any purpose, in any medium, provided you keep the same copyright for any other works you derived from this work.

2. No Weakening of GPL Copyleft.

The availability of this Exception does not imply any general reservation that this copyleft software is restricted by the copyleft requirements of the license of the GPL.

Additional terms, permissions or non-permissions, may be stated in the text of a separate written license, or stated as exceptions, or in a document incorporated by reference.

8. Termination.

You may not propagate or modify a covered work except as expressly provided under this License. Any attempt otherwise to propagate or modify it is void, and will automatically terminate your rights under this License (including any patent licenses granted under the third paragraph of section 11) as soon as you are discovered doing so.

However, if you cease all violation of this License, then your license from a particular copyright holder is reinstated (a) provisionally, unless and until the copyright holder explicitly and finally indicates your violation and (b) permanently, if the copyright holder has not notified you of the violation prior to 60 days after the cessation.

Moreover, your license from a particular copyright holder is reinstated permanently if the copyright holder notifies you of the violation no more than 60 days after the cessation, and you have received notice of violation of this License (as to that work) from that copyright holder, and you have taken the action required by the notice to cure the violation prior to 30 days after your receipt of the notice.

Termination of your rights under this section does not terminate the license of other recipients who have received copies of the work or authorized copies of the work from you, or who have received the work directly from you without your knowledge.

9. Acceptance Not Required for Redistribution.

You are not required to accept this License in order to receive or run a copy of the Program. Facilities for running a program automatically receive a copy of the License from the program distributor. However, you must accept this License in order to propagate or modify it. Therefore, by exercising your rights under this License to receive or run a copy of the Program, you indicate your acceptance of this License to do so.

10. Automatic Licensing of Recipients.

Each time you convey a covered work, the recipient automatically receives a license from the original licensor to run the work and propagate that work, subject to this License. You are not responsible for enforcing compliance by third parties with this License.

An "entity transaction" is a transaction transferring control of an organization, or substantially all assets of one, or acquiring or disposing of, in any capacity, assets of one, or transferring to one or more persons all or substantially all of their assets, or any combination of the foregoing. An organization is a legal entity, including a corporation, partnership, trust, sole proprietorship, or other unincorporated entity, or any combination of the foregoing. An individual is a natural person. An "entity" is either a legal entity or an individual.

Each contributor grants you a non-exclusive, worldwide, royalty-free license under the copyright and/or patent rights to copy, modify, and propagate the program, subject to this License. In addition, each contributor grants you a non-exclusive, worldwide, royalty-free license under the copyright and/or patent rights to copy, modify, and propagate the program, subject to this License, in any medium or format, and to transmit it to a recipient, by any means or by any information retrieval system, provided that you acknowledge the contributor as the author of the program and you keep intact all copyright notices for the program and for any part it contains, including any notices that are required by applicable patents to authorize third parties to use and/or reproduce the program in connection with the program.

In the following three paragraphs, a "patent licensee" is any person or entity that has received a license from the patent holder to make, use, sell, offer for sale, import, and otherwise use a covered work, subject to the terms and conditions of the license. A "patent claim" is any claim for which a patent licensee is entitled to a patent. A "patent" is any right or title in an invention that is granted by a patenting authority.

If you convey a covered work, knowingly reproducing a patent license, or conveying a covered work with a notice that refers to a patent license, but the covered work does not include a patent license, you must accompany the work with a written acknowledgment that you are not conveying a patent license. However, if you convey a covered work, knowingly reproducing a patent license, or conveying a covered work with a notice that refers to a patent license, but the covered work does not include a patent license, you must accompany the work with a written acknowledgment that you are not conveying a patent license.

If you convey a covered work, knowingly reproducing a patent license, or conveying a covered work with a notice that refers to a patent license, but the covered work does not include a patent license, you must accompany the work with a written acknowledgment that you are not conveying a patent license.

If you convey a covered work, knowingly reproducing a patent license, or conveying a covered work with a notice that refers to a patent license, but the covered work does not include a patent license, you must accompany the work with a written acknowledgment that you are not conveying a patent license.

Free Software Foundation

The licenses for most software are designed to take away your freedom to share and change it. By contrast, the GNU Lesser General Public License is designed to guarantee your freedom to share and change free software - to make sure the software is free for all users.

This license, the Lesser General Public License, applies to some smaller pieces of software that are used to support larger software. This license is the best way to make sure that you can use and share any software that depends on the software.

When we speak of free software, we are referring to freedom of use, not to the price of the software. We think of free software as software that you can distribute copies of and change it, for which you can charge whatever you wish, or even give it away for free. We think of free software as software that you can use and share it with anyone you like, for which you can charge whatever you wish, or even give it away for free.

To protect your rights, we need to make restrictions that forbid distributors to deny you these rights or to assert new ones that you do not have. These restrictions translate to certain responsibilities for you if you distribute copies of the library or if you modify it.

For example, if you distribute copies of the library, whether gratis or for a fee, you must give the recipients all the rights that you have. You must make sure that they, too, receive or can get the source code. You must make sure that they can copy and modify the library and that they can distribute copies of their modified versions.

We protect your rights with two different methods. The first method is to copyright the library and give you a license that says you can do whatever you like with the library, subject to certain restrictions. The second method is to not copyright the library at all.

We protect your rights with a license that says you can do whatever you like with the library, subject to certain restrictions. The second method is to not copyright the library at all.

Firstly, software patents pose a constant threat to the existence of any free program. We wish to avoid this threat. We have therefore written this license in a way that can avoid patent problems.

Most GNU software, including some libraries, is covered by the ordinary GNU General Public License. This license, the GNU Lesser General Public License, applies to certain GNU libraries and other special programs.

When a program is linked with a library, whether statically or using a shared library, the combination of the two is legally considered a derivative work. GNU's policy is to license the derivative work, as a whole, under the GNU Lesser General Public License. This license is more liberal than the ordinary GNU General Public License because it permits linking with the library under the terms of the Lesser General Public License.

We call this license the "lesser" General Public License because it has less restrictions than the "ordinary" General Public License. It is an improvement on the ordinary General Public License because it permits linking with the library under the terms of the Lesser General Public License.

For example, we have no objection to anyone's using our library as a sub-library in a program that is licensed under the ordinary GNU General Public License. However, the Lesser General Public License provides advantages in certain circumstances.

GNU LESSER GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE Version 2.1, February 1999

Copyright (C) 1991, 1999 Free Software Foundation, Inc.
51 Franklin Street, Fifth Floor, Boston, MA 02110 USA
Everyone is permitted to copy and distribute verbatim copies of this License Document, but changing it is not allowed.
This is the first released version of the Lesser GPL. It also counts as the successor of the GNU Library Public License, version 2, because the version number 2.1.

Preamble.
The licenses for most software are designed to take away your freedom to share and change it. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to guarantee your freedom to share and change free software: to make sure the software is free for all users.

This license, the Lesser General Public License, applies to some software packages. It is designed to make sure the software is free for those who use it. It is also designed to make sure that you have the right to change the software if you need it. You can do it too, but we suggest you first study carefully about whether this license or the ordinary General Public License in the distribution is more suitable for your particular case, based on the requirements below.

When we speak of free software, we are referring to freedom of use, not price. Our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of free software (with charge to those who pass it to you), and to receive updates for free software if you want it; that you can change the software and use pieces of it in new free programs; and that your changes can be put into new versions of the software, which you and others can share.

To protect your rights, we need to make restrictions that forbid distributors to deny you these rights or to ask you to surrender these rights. These restrictions translate to certain responsibilities for you:

For example, if you distribute copies of the library, whether gratis or for a fee, you must make sure that you put into circulation copies of the library with the same rights. You must make sure that they, too, receive or can get the source code. If you link other code with the library, you must ensure that the combined work is licensed under the terms of this license. You must also make sure that you put into circulation copies of the library after making changes to the library and releasing it, and you must make those changes to the GNU GPL.

We protect your rights with a two-step method: (1) we copyright the library (2) we offer you this license, which gives you legal permission to copy, distribute and/or modify the library.

For example, distributor A may wish to make it very clear that there is no warranty for the free library. Also, if the library is used in a program, distributor B may wish to make it very clear that the program's warranty will not be affected by problems that might be determined by others.

Finally, software patents pose a constant threat to the existence of any free program. We wish to make sure that a company cannot effectively restrict the users of a free program by obtaining a separate patent covering a certain feature. Therefore, we must be able to prevent the creation of a patent which restricts more than the full freedom of use specified in this license.

Redistribution. In order to prevent someone from using the library as a Trojan horse to distribute a program that is not free, we must be able to prevent the creation of a program that is not free. We must also be able to prevent the creation of a program that is not free. We must also be able to prevent the creation of a program that is not free. We must also be able to prevent the creation of a program that is not free.

When a program is linked with a library, whether statically or using a shared object, the combined work is licensed under the terms of this license. The license conditions for the library and the program are combined and the combined work is licensed under the terms of this license. The license conditions for the library and the program are combined and the combined work is licensed under the terms of this license.

We call this license the "Lesser" General Public License because it does less to protect the user's freedom than the ordinary General Public License. It also provides other Free Software Foundation users of a program using our free program. These circumstances are the reasons for the name. However, the Lesser License provides advantages in certain special circumstances.

For example, on rare occasions, there may be a special need to encourage the widest possible use of a certain library, to make it easier to do a particular project, to make the library more widely known, or to make the library more widely known. In such cases, there is little to be gained by limiting the free library to free software only, so we use the Lesser General Public License.

In other cases, permission to use a particular library in non-free programs may be a practical matter. For example, permission to use the GNU C library in non-free programs enables new users to use the GNU C library in their operating systems, as well as in their own, without operating system.

Although the Lesser General Public License is less protective of the user's freedom, it does ensure that the user of a program that is linked with the library has the freedom and the protection for the program that a modified version of the library.

The precise terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification follow. You must remain in full compliance with the terms of this license. The license conditions for the library and the program are combined and the combined work is licensed under the terms of this license.

GNU LESSER GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE TERMS AND CONDITIONS FOR COPYING, DISTRIBUTION AND MODIFICATION

0. This License Agreement applies to any software library or other program which contains a notice placed by the copyright holder or other authorized party stating that it is licensed under the terms of this Lesser General Public License (also called "this license"). Each license is addressed as "you".

A "library" means a collection of software functions and/or data organized as an object file or as a shared library. The term "program" refers to any software library or other program which contains a notice placed by the copyright holder or other authorized party stating that it is licensed under the terms of this Lesser General Public License (also called "this license"). Each license is addressed as "you".

The "library" below, refers to any software library or other program which contains a notice placed by the copyright holder or other authorized party stating that it is licensed under the terms of this Lesser General Public License (also called "this license"). Each license is addressed as "you".

"Source code" for a work means the preferred form of the work for making modifications to it. For a library, complete source code means all the source code for all modules it contains, plus any associated interface definition files, object code libraries, or other resources used to create the library.

Activities other than copying, distribution and modification are not restricted by this license: they are allowed in any medium, without charge, and without restriction on the number of copies made. This license does not restrict the ability of a person to use the library in a program that is not free software, or to use the library in a program that is not free software, or to use the library in a program that is not free software.

1. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the library's source code, either in whole or in part, under the following conditions:
a) You must copy and distribute the entire text of this license along with the library.
b) You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may at your option offer warranty protection in addition to a fee.

2. You may modify your copy or copies of the library or any portion of it, to form a work based on the library, and copy and distribute such modifications or works under the terms of Section 1 above, provided that you also meet all of these conditions:
a) The modified work must itself be a software library.
b) You must cause the files modified to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.
c) You must cause the whole of the work to be licensed at no charge to all third parties under the terms of this License.
d) If a facility in the modified library refers to a function or a variable name that is not in the library, you must use a name that is not in the library, and you must use a name that is not in the library, and you must use a name that is not in the library.

For example, a function in a library to compute square roots may be named "sqrt", but a function in a library to compute square roots may be named "sqrt_sqr". If the modified library does not use the name "sqrt", the name "sqrt_sqr" is not a problem. However, if the modified library does use the name "sqrt", the name "sqrt_sqr" is a problem. If the modified library does use the name "sqrt", the name "sqrt_sqr" is a problem.

These requirements apply to the modified work as a whole. If you modify a portion of the work, you must ensure that the modified portion is licensed under the terms of this license. If you modify a portion of the work, you must ensure that the modified portion is licensed under the terms of this license.

3. In addition, mere aggregation of another work not based on the library with the library (or with a work based on the library) as a whole is a work based on the library. In such a case, the copyright holder of the other work must also comply with the terms of this license.

4. You may copy and distribute the library (or a portion or a derivative work based on the library) under the terms of this license, provided that you also meet all of these conditions:
a) If distribution of the library is made by offering access to copy, then you must make the source code available to all those who receive the library, and you must make the source code available to all those who receive the library.
b) You must make the source code available to all those who receive the library, and you must make the source code available to all those who receive the library.
c) You must make the source code available to all those who receive the library, and you must make the source code available to all those who receive the library.

5. A program that contains no derivative of any portion of the library is not a derivative work, even if it is statically or dynamically linked with it, in whole or in part. The object code for a program that is not a derivative work may be linked with it, in whole or in part. The object code for a program that is not a derivative work may be linked with it, in whole or in part.

6. As an exception to the Sections above, you may also combine or link a library with a program, or with a library, to produce a work containing portions of the library, and distribute that work under the terms of the license for the program, provided that the program is not a derivative work of the library.

7. You must also make the source code of the program available to all those who receive the program, and you must make the source code available to all those who receive the program.

8. You must also make the source code of the program available to all those who receive the program, and you must make the source code available to all those who receive the program.

9. You must also make the source code of the program available to all those who receive the program, and you must make the source code available to all those who receive the program.

10. You must also make the source code of the program available to all those who receive the program, and you must make the source code available to all those who receive the program.

11. You must also make the source code of the program available to all those who receive the program, and you must make the source code available to all those who receive the program.

12. You must also make the source code of the program available to all those who receive the program, and you must make the source code available to all those who receive the program.

13. You must also make the source code of the program available to all those who receive the program, and you must make the source code available to all those who receive the program.

14. You must also make the source code of the program available to all those who receive the program, and you must make the source code available to all those who receive the program.

15. You must also make the source code of the program available to all those who receive the program, and you must make the source code available to all those who receive the program.

16. You must also make the source code of the program available to all those who receive the program, and you must make the source code available to all those who receive the program.

17. You must also make the source code of the program available to all those who receive the program, and you must make the source code available to all those who receive the program.

18. You must also make the source code of the program available to all those who receive the program, and you must make the source code available to all those who receive the program.

19. You must also make the source code of the program available to all those who receive the program, and you must make the source code available to all those who receive the program.

20. You must also make the source code of the program available to all those who receive the program, and you must make the source code available to all those who receive the program.

7. You may place library facilities that are a work based on the library side-by-side with a single library together with other library facilities not covered by this license, and distribute such a combined library and of the other library facilities in otherwise derivative, and extended this use do these two things.

- a) Arrange the combined library with a copy of the same work based on the library, associated with any other library facilities. This must be distributed under the terms of the Facilities alone.
- b) Give prominent notice with the combined library of the fact that you do it as a work based on the library, and conditions. You may not copy, modify, sublicense, link with, or distribute otherwise to copy, modify, sublicense, link with, or distribute under this license, and you will automatically terminate your rights under this license. However, parties who have received or might receive from you under this license will not have their licenses terminated in such a case unless they notice that condition.
8. You are not required to accept this license, since you have not signed it. However, notice that you grant your permission to modify or distribute the library or its derivative works. Those actions are prohibited by you if you do not accept this license. Therefore, by modifying or distributing the library or its derivative works, you indicate your acceptance of this license to do so, and all its terms and conditions for copying, distribution or modification of the library or works based on it.

9. Each time you redistribute the library (or any work based on the library), the recipient automatically receives a license from the original licensor to copy, distribute, modify, sublicense, and to use the library subject to these restrictions. You may not impose additional restrictions on the recipient's exercise of the rights granted herein, but you may impose such additional conditions by this license with respect to copying and distribution of the library or works based on it.

10. If, as a consequence of a court judgment or allegation of patent infringement or for any other reason not covered by patent licensing conditions are imposed on you (whether by court order, agreement or otherwise) that contradict the conditions of this license, you may not exercise your rights under this license. If you cannot avoid doing so, you may not distribute the library or its derivative works. For example, if a patent claim is asserted against you and you are unable to conduct business with respect to the library, you may not distribute the library or its derivative works. This license should not be construed to affect any patent claim or patent application against the library or its derivative works.

11. If you make a substantial contribution to the library, you may wish to include your name in the author's list of contributors. However, your name does not need to be included in order to be a contributor. Any person who makes a substantial contribution to the library will be included in the author's list of contributors.

12. The copyright for this section is held in trust for the benefit of the community, and the license is intended to apply in other circumstances. It is not the purpose of this section to inhibit you to enforce any patent or other property right claim or to conduct a validity or enforceability challenge to a patent claim, or to conduct a validity or enforceability challenge to a patent claim. However, you may not enforce any patent or other property right claim or to conduct a validity or enforceability challenge to a patent claim in a way that would prevent the library or its derivative works from being distributed or used by others. It is the intent of the author to make it clear that the only way you could satisfy both a and this license would be to refuse entirely from distribution of the library.

13. If the distribution under the terms of the library is restricted in certain jurisdictions by patents or by copyright interests, the original copyright holder will make the necessary changes to the license to allow the distribution in those jurisdictions. You may not make such changes without the prior written consent of the copyright holder. In such case, this license incorporates the limitations as written in the body of this license.

14. The Free Software Foundation has published revised and/or new versions of the Lesser General Public License from time to time. Such new versions will be similar to the present version, but not identical. Each version is given a distinguishing version number. If the library has been released under a particular version of this license, you may choose to use a later version. In order to use a later version, you must have received a copy of the later version from the Free Software Foundation. If the library does not come with a license version number, you may choose any version you wish provided you also meet the conditions of this license.

15. If you wish to incorporate parts of the library into other free software, you may do so. You may use any portion of this license which you wish in any other software. In order to use a later version, you must have received a copy of the later version from the Free Software Foundation. In order to use a later version, you must have received a copy of the later version from the Free Software Foundation. In order to use a later version, you must have received a copy of the later version from the Free Software Foundation. In order to use a later version, you must have received a copy of the later version from the Free Software Foundation. 18. END OF TERMS AND CONDITIONS

How to Apply These Terms to Your New Libraries

If you develop a new library, you want it to be of the greatest benefit to the community. You can do so by providing your library under these terms or, alternatively, under the terms of the ordinary General Public License.

To apply these terms to the full range of your library, it is advised to attach them to the start of each source file to most effectively cover the vastness of source code. Each file should have at least the following text and additional text if appropriate:

one line to give the library's name and a brief idea of what it does.
Copyright (C) year - name of author
This library is free software; you can redistribute it under the terms of the GNU Lesser General Public License

You should have received a copy of the GNU Lesser General Public License along with this library. If not, write to the Free Software Foundation, Inc., 51 Franklin Street, Fifth Floor, Boston, MA 02110-1301 USA

Also see information on how to contact your distributor and sponsor.

You should also get your sponsor (if you work as a programmer) or your distributor. Here is a sample of the names:

How to Apply These Terms to Your New Libraries

If you develop a new library, you want it to be of the greatest benefit to the community. You can do so by providing your library under these terms or, alternatively, under the terms of the ordinary General Public License.

To apply these terms to the full range of your library, it is advised to attach them to the start of each source file to most effectively cover the vastness of source code. Each file should have at least the following text and additional text if appropriate:

one line to give the library's name and a brief idea of what it does.
Copyright (C) year - name of author
This library is free software; you can redistribute it under above, provided that you also meet all of these conditions:

- a) The modified work must itself be a software library.
- b) You must cause the files modified to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.
- c) The modified version must carry a notice that is placed in all files that derive from the files from which you made the modifications. This notice must be placed in the source code of the modified files.
- d) If you made the modification by applying patches to the original code, you must ensure that the patches are self-contained and can be applied to the original code without the need for any other modifications to the original code.
- e) If you made the modification by applying patches to the original code, you must ensure that the patches are self-contained and can be applied to the original code without the need for any other modifications to the original code.

If you are making a modification to a file that is not a source file, you must ensure that the modification is self-contained and can be applied to the original code without the need for any other modifications to the original code.

These requirements apply to the modified work as a whole. If identifiable sections of that work are not derived from the Library, they can be reasonably considered independent and separate works in themselves, and this license does not apply to those sections. However, if you distribute the modified work, you must ensure that the entire modified work is distributed under the terms of this license.

When we speak of free software, we are referring to freedom of use, not price. Our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure you are free to distribute copies of free software (and charge for them if you wish), that you can change the software and use pieces of it in new programs, and that you are authorized to use the code in your own programs.

To protect your rights, we need to make restrictions that forbid distributors to deny you these rights or to attempt to impose new ones. These restrictions translate to certain responsibilities for you if you distribute copies of the library or any derivative work.

For example, if you distribute copies of the library, whether gratis or for a fee, you must also give the recipients all the rights that we give you. You must make sure that they, too, receive or can get the source code. If you place any other code with the library, you must ensure that those code pieces can be distributed with the library under the same General Public License. You may not impose any further restrictions on the recipients' exercise of the rights granted herein. You are not responsible for enforcing compliance with the GPL by others.

We protect your rights with a two-step method: (1) we copyright the library, and (2) we offer you our patent grants.

To protect each distributor, we want to make it very clear that there is no warranty for the free library. Also, if the library is modified by someone else and passed on, the recipient should know that what they have is not the original version, so that any problems that come up they can go to the original author. A warranty or liability for a modified version would be a liability for the original author's reputation will not be affected by problems that might be encountered by others.

Finally, software patents pose a constant threat to the existence of any free program. We wish to make sure that a company cannot effectively restrict the users of a free program by obtaining a separate patent covering one aspect of the program. A patent that restricts license must be a prior restraint, prevention of which is a basic purpose of the GPL. A patent that restricts license must be consistent with the full freedom of use specified in this license.

Most GNU software, including some libraries, is covered by the GNU General Public License. This license, the GNU Lesser General Public License, and the GNU Free Documentation License, are the three different forms of the ordinary GNU General Public License. We use this license for certain libraries in order to permit linking those libraries into non-free programs.

When a program is linked with a library, whether statically or using a shared library, the combination is still a single, unified work, and the combination has the criteria of freedom. This Lesser General Public License permits more lax criteria for linking other code with the library. This license is the only one that permits this.

We call this license the "lesser" General Public License because it does less to protect the user's freedom than the ordinary General Public License. It also provides other free software developers access to an additional user: copying and distributing the program as a library. However, the Lesser License provides advantages in certain special circumstances.

For example, on rare occasions, there may be a special need to encourage the widest possible use of a certain library, to satisfy an end-user community. In such a case, the program must be licensed to use the library. A more frequent case is that a free library does the same job as a widely used non-free library. In this case, there is little to be gained by linking the free library to free software only, so we use the Lesser General Public License.

In other cases, permission to use a particular library in non-free programs enables a greater number of people to use a large body of free software. For example, on the UNIX operating system, a library is often used as a library to support other free programs. This is the case with the GNU C library. In such cases, there is no way to avoid linking non-free programs with the library, so we use the Lesser General Public License.

Although the Lesser General Public License is less protective of the user's freedom, it does ensure that the user of a program that is linked with the library has the freedom and the opportunity to use the library in a non-free program.

The precise terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification are given in the licenses. For a complete list of the terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification, see the licenses. GNU LESSER GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE

0. This License Agreement applies to any software library or other program which contains a notice placed by the copyright holder or other authorized party (the "licensor") indicating that it is licensed under this license, which is similar to the license text shown here.

1. A library, means a collection of software functions and/or data prepared as to be conveniently linked with application programs which use the same functions and data to form executable programs.

The "library", below, refers to any such software library or work which has been distributed under these terms. A "work based on the library" means either the library or any derivative work under copyright law that is based on the library. An "executable" means a program that can be run by a computer. A "work based on the library" means either the library or any derivative work under copyright law that is based on the library. An "executable" means a program that can be run by a computer.

Activities other than copying, distribution and modification are not restricted by this license. For example, you may distribute copies of the library as a library, or you may use the library in a program that is not a library. You may also use the library in a program that is not a library.

1. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the library's source code as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you prominently and appropriately publish on each copy an appropriate copyright notice and disclaimer of warranty; keep intact all the notices that refer to this license and to the absence of warranty; and distribute a copy of this license along with the library.

You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may at your option charge warranty protection in addition to a fee.

2. You may modify your copy or copies of the library or any portion of it, thus forming a work based on the library, and copy and distribute such modifications and the work based on the library in any medium, provided that you also meet all of these conditions:

a) The modified work must itself be a software library.

b) You must cause the files and documentation to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.

c) You must cause the whole of the work to be licensed at no charge to all third parties under the terms of this License.

d) If a facility in the modified library refers to a function or a data structure in the library, other than an as-needed passed object, you must cause the modified library to use that facility with the same name as the original library.

(For example, if a library calls a function `foo`, and you modify the library so that it calls a function `bar`, you must rename the function `foo` in the modified library.)

These requirements apply to the modified work as a whole. If identifiable portions of that work are derived from the library, you must cause those portions to be licensed under the same terms as the library.

method customarily used for software interchange.

If distribution of object code is made by offering access to copy from a designated place, then offering replacement access to the source code from the same place satisfies the requirement to distribute the source code, even though third parties are not compelled to copy the source along with the object code.

5. A program that contains a derivation of any portion of the Library, but is not linked with the Library, is considered to be a separate work for the purposes of this License, and therefore falls outside the scope of this License.

However, linking a work that uses the Library with the Library creates an executable that is a derivative of the Library, because it contains portions of the Library. Therefore, a work that uses the Library is considered to be a derivative of the Library, and falls under the terms of this License.

When a work that uses the Library also includes the Library, it is a derivative of the Library, because it contains portions of the Library. Therefore, a work that uses the Library is considered to be a derivative of the Library, and falls under the terms of this License.

When a work that uses the Library also includes the Library, it is a derivative of the Library, because it contains portions of the Library. Therefore, a work that uses the Library is considered to be a derivative of the Library, and falls under the terms of this License.

If such an object file uses only numerical parameters, data structures, and routines, and the object file is a derivative of the Library, it is not a derivative of the Library, and therefore falls outside the scope of this License.

Structure. If the work is a derivative of the Library, you may distribute the object code for the work, subject to the terms of this License. However, you may not distribute the source code for the work, unless you also distribute the source code for the Library, and you must do so under the terms of this License.

6. As an alternative to the conditions above, you may also choose to link a work that uses the Library with the Library to produce a combined work that you distribute, provided that you comply with the conditions of this License. However, you may not distribute the work under the terms of this License, unless you also distribute the source code for the work, and you must do so under the terms of this License.

7. You must give prominent notice with each copy of the work that the Library is included in the work, and you must also include a copy of this License. You must supply a copy of this License. If the work is a derivative of the Library, you must include the copyright notice for the Library, and you must also include the copyright notice for the work. You must also include the copyright notice for the work, and you must also include the copyright notice for the work.

8. Accompany the work with the complete corresponding machine-readable source code for the Library, including whatever changes were used in the work, which must be distributed under the terms of this License. You must also include a copy of this License. You must also include the copyright notice for the Library, and you must also include the copyright notice for the work.

9. Use a suitable shared library mechanism for linking with the Library, a suitable mechanism is one that (i) uses at run time a copy of the Library already present on the user's computer system, and (ii) uses the run-time mechanism to replace the Library with a modified version of the Library, if the user's computer system has one. You must also include the copyright notice for the Library, and you must also include the copyright notice for the work.

10. Accompany the work with a written offer, valid for at least two years, to provide and charge a reasonable price for a replacement copy of the Library, if the user's computer system has one. You must also include the copyright notice for the Library, and you must also include the copyright notice for the work.

11. If distribution of the work is made by offering access to copy from a designated place, you must also provide access to copy the source code for the work from the same place.

12. Verify that the user has already received a copy of the source code for the work, and you must also include the copyright notice for the work, and you must also include the copyright notice for the work.

13. For a derivative, you must include the copyright notice for the work, and you must also include the copyright notice for the work. You must also include the copyright notice for the work, and you must also include the copyright notice for the work.

14. It may happen that the requirements of this License conflict with the requirements of other licenses. You must choose the requirements that are most restrictive. You must also include the copyright notice for the work, and you must also include the copyright notice for the work.

15. You may place library facilities that are a work based on the Library into a single library together with other library facilities not covered by this License, and distribute such a combined work under the terms of this License. You must also include the copyright notice for the Library, and you must also include the copyright notice for the work.

16. Accompany the combined library with a written offer, valid for at least two years, to provide and charge a reasonable price for a replacement copy of the Library, if the user's computer system has one. You must also include the copyright notice for the Library, and you must also include the copyright notice for the work.

17. You may not copy, modify, sublicense, link with, or distribute the Library if you are not authorized to do so by the copyright holder. You must also include the copyright notice for the Library, and you must also include the copyright notice for the work.

18. You are not required to accept this License, unless you have not licensed it. However, nothing else grants you permission to modify or distribute the Library if you do not accept this License. Therefore, by modifying or distributing the Library, you are deemed to accept this License. You must also include the copyright notice for the Library, and you must also include the copyright notice for the work.

19. Each time you redistribute the Library (or any work based on the Library) under the terms of this License, you must also include the copyright notice for the Library, and you must also include the copyright notice for the work.

20. If you are a copyright holder or a party to a copyright infringement action, you must also include the copyright notice for the Library, and you must also include the copyright notice for the work.

21. This section is intended to make thoroughly clear what is believed to be a consequence of the fact that the Library is a derivative of the Library. You must also include the copyright notice for the Library, and you must also include the copyright notice for the work.

22. If the distribution and/or use of the Library is restricted in your country by patents or other intellectual property rights, you must also include the copyright notice for the Library, and you must also include the copyright notice for the work.

23. The Free Software Foundation may publish revised and/or new versions of the GNU General Public License from time to time. Such new versions will be similar in spirit to the present version, but may differ in detail to address new problems or concerns.

Each version is given a distinguishing version number. If the Library carries a version number of this License which applies to it and you are not a party to an arrangement under which the Library is to be modified, you must also include the copyright notice for the Library, and you must also include the copyright notice for the work.

24. If you wish to incorporate parts of the Library into other free software, you may distribute copies of such other software under the terms of the GNU General Public License, provided that you also include the copyright notice for the Library, and you must also include the copyright notice for the work.

Freedom

The licenses for most software are designed to take away your freedom to share and change it. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to guarantee your freedom to have and to change free software: to make sure the software is free for all users.

This license, the lesser general public license, applies to some specially designated software packages—Liberally licensed software. You can use it too, but we suggest you first think carefully about whether this license or the ordinary GNU General Public License in the latter section would better suit your particular system.

When you speak of free software, you are referring to freedom of use: you have the freedom to distribute copies of free software (and charge for them) and to make copies of them. You also have the right to get copies of the source code, to change the software and use pieces of it in new free programs; and that you are licensed to use the code in these ways.

To protect your rights, we need to make restrictions that forbid distributors to deny you these rights or to impose additional restrictions. These restrictions translate to certain responsibilities for you if you distribute copies of the library or your work. For example, if you distribute copies of the library, whether gratis or not, you must also make available the source code for those copies. You must make sure that they, too, receive the same license. If you link other code with the library, you must provide complete access to the recipients, either by making copies of the combined files or by making them available in a form that can be combined with the library after making changes to the library and recompiling it, and you must also make these files available to your users.

We protect your rights with a license that gives you the freedom to copy, distribute and modify the library. It is licensed to you, your users and your distributors, which leaves you and your distributors free to copy, distribute and modify the library.

To protect each distributor, we want to make it very clear that there is no warranty for the library. Also, if the library is modified by someone else and passed on, the recipients should know that what they have is not the original version, so that the original author's reputation will not be affected by problems that might be introduced by others.

Finally, software patents pose a constant threat to the existence of any free program. We wish to make sure that a company cannot restrict the rights of our users by using patents to circumvent the distribution of the library. Therefore, we limit that we cannot accept any license that grants patent licenses. We limit that we cannot accept any license that grants patent licenses.

Most GNU software, including some libraries, is covered by the ordinary GNU General Public License. This license, the GNU Lesser General Public License, applies to certain designated libraries, and is also used to protect your rights to use these libraries in other programs. Your use of a library is covered by this license for certain libraries in order to permit linking those libraries into non-free programs.

When a program is linked with a library, whether statically or using a shared library, the combination of the two is legally considered a combined work, and the operator of that combination is bound to the terms of the license of the library. Our Lesser General Public License therefore permits this linking only if the criteria for a library license are satisfied. The Lesser General Public License contains more detailed criteria for linking other code with the library.

We call this license the "lesser" General Public License because it does less to protect the user's freedom than the ordinary General Public License. It is therefore called "lesser" in order to distinguish it from the ordinary General Public License. However, the Lesser License provides advantages to certain special circumstances.

For example, we may occasionally have a special need to encourage the widest possible use of a certain library, so that it becomes a de-facto standard. To achieve this, we would like to incorporate the library into a proprietary operating system. We feel that such an arrangement would be useful for certain libraries, and we therefore include a Lesser License for these libraries. A new paragraph 4 is added to the Lesser License, which allows us to do this. It is our hope that this arrangement will help us to create a more useful operating system, and we encourage you to do the same. You must make sure that you comply with the Lesser License, and you must also make sure that you comply with the ordinary GNU General Public License.

A major reason for wanting to use a particular library in a free program is because a particular number of people use it as part of their free software. A greater number of people use it as part of their non-free programs. We would like to help the free software community by providing a way to use the library in both free and non-free programs, and we therefore include a Lesser License for these libraries. However, the Lesser License provides advantages to certain special circumstances.

Although the Lesser General Public License is less restrictive than the ordinary GNU General Public License, it does protect the user's freedom to copy, distribute and modify the library. It is licensed to you, your users and your distributors, which leaves you and your distributors free to copy, distribute and modify the library.

The precise terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification follow. Any notice that refers to the difference between a work based on the library and a work that uses the library, the former contains the text of the Lesser License, and the latter must contain the text of the ordinary GNU General Public License.

GNU LESSER GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE
Terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification.

0. This License Agreement applies to any software library or other program which contains a notice placed by the copyright holder or other authorized party stating it may be distributed under the terms of this Lesser General Public License (also called "this License"). Each license is addressed as "you".

1. A library's name, a collection of software functions and/or data prepared as to be conveniently linked with application programs which use some of these functions and data to form executable, may be called the "library". It is licensed to you, your users and your distributors, which leaves you and your distributors free to copy, distribute and modify the library.

2. The "library" here, refers to any such software library or work which has been distributed under this License. A work based on the library must be distributed under the terms of this License. If you link other code with the library, you must provide complete access to the recipients, either by making copies of the combined files or by making them available in a form that can be combined with the library after making changes to the library and recompiling it, and you must also make these files available to your users.

3. In order to make it unambiguously clear that there is no warranty for the library, we add this paragraph to the Lesser General Public License. If you link other code with the library, you must provide complete access to the recipients, either by making copies of the combined files or by making them available in a form that can be combined with the library after making changes to the library and recompiling it, and you must also make these files available to your users.

4. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the library's complete source code as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you copy the notice in its entirety to all copies and that you also make available a printed copy of the source code to all recipients of the library's source code. You may also copy and distribute copies of the library's source code, provided that you copy the notice in its entirety to all copies and that you also make available a printed copy of the source code to all recipients of the library's source code.

5. You may modify your copy or copies of the library or any portion thereof in any way, and you may distribute the results under the terms of this License. You are not required to provide access to the source code of your modifications, and you may distribute your copy or copies of the library or any portion thereof in any way, and you may distribute the results under the terms of this License. You are not required to provide access to the source code of your modifications, and you may distribute your copy or copies of the library or any portion thereof in any way, and you may distribute the results under the terms of this License.

redistributed by law if you do not accept this License. Therefore, by redistributing or distributing the Program (or any work based on the Program), you indicate your acceptance of this License to do so, and you are authorized to convey the Program or works based on it.

8. Each time you redistribute the Program (or any work based on the Program), the recipient automatically receives a License from the original copyright holder through you. You must make sure that the recipient receives a copy of this License, and you must make sure that the recipient is aware of the rights granted herein. You may also make arrangements for automatic transmission of this License to the recipient.

9. If you convey a copy of a program that is licensed under the GNU GPL to a recipient, you must also convey to that recipient a copy of the GNU GPL. If any portion of this section is held invalid or unenforceable under applicable law, it shall be deemed to apply in its original form.

It is not the purpose of this section to induce you to infringe any patents or other property right claims or to exercise liability of any kind. This section is intended to protect the copyright holder's right to distribute copies of the Program and to receive payment for such copies. It is not intended to limit the scope of any patent or other property right claims or to exercise liability of any kind.

This section is intended to make thoroughly clear what is believed to be a consequence of the rest of this License.

10. If the distribution and/or use of the Program is restricted in any way by applicable patent or trademark law, you may, if you are the copyright holder or a licensee of the Program, make exceptions to the restrictions in the program code to the extent necessary to exercise those patent or trademark rights.

11. The Free Software Foundation may publish revised and/or new versions of the GNU GPL from time to time. Such new versions will be similar in spirit to the present version, but may differ in detail to address new problems or concerns.

Each version is given a distinguishing version number. If the Program is licensed under the GNU GPL, you may choose to run the Program under the terms of either this version or of any later version published by the Free Software Foundation. If the Program is licensed under the terms of any one of these versions, you may not choose to run the Program under the terms of any other version.

12. If you wish to incorporate parts of the Program into other free programs, you may do so. If you wish to make a new version of a program, you may do so. If you wish to make a new version of a program, you may do so. If you wish to make a new version of a program, you may do so.

13. NO WARRANTY. THE PROGRAM IS PROVIDED WITHOUT WARRANTY OF ANY KIND, EITHER EXPRESS OR IMPLIED, INCLUDING BUT NOT LIMITED TO THE IMPLIED WARRANTIES OF MERCHANTABILITY AND FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE. YOU ASSUME THE COST OF ALL NECESSARY SERVICING, REPAIR OR CORRECTION.

14. IN NO EVENT WILL THE PROGRAM BE HELD LIABLE TO ANY PARTY FOR DAMAGES, INCLUDING GENERAL, SPECIAL, INCIDENTAL, OR CONSEQUENTIAL DAMAGES, INCLUDING LOSS OF PROFITS, BUSINESS INTERRUPTION, LOSS OF DATA, OR ANY OTHER ECONOMIC LOSS, ARISING OUT OF THE USE OR INABILITY TO USE THE PROGRAM, EVEN IF YOU HAVE BEEN ADVISED OF THE POSSIBILITY OF SUCH DAMAGE.

HOW TO APPLY THESE TERMS TO YOUR NEW PROGRAM

If you develop a new program, and you want it to be of the greatest benefit to the public, the best way to achieve this is to make it free software which everyone can redistribute and change under these terms.

To do so, attach the following notices to the Program. To do so, attach the following notices to the Program. To do so, attach the following notices to the Program.

One line to give the program's name and a brief idea of what it does: Copyright (C) year name of author.

This program is free software; you can redistribute it and/or modify it under the terms of the GNU General Public License as published by the Free Software Foundation, either version 2 of the License, or (at your option) any later version.

This program is distributed in the hope that it will be useful, MERCHANTABILITY or FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE. See the GNU General Public License for more details.

You should have received a copy of the GNU General Public License along with this program. If not, write to the Free Software Foundation, Inc., 59 Temple Place, Suite 330, Boston, MA 02111-1307 USA.

Also add information on how to contact you by electronic and paper mail.

If the program is interactive, make it output a short notice like this when it starts in an interactive mode:

Copyright (C) year name of author. This program is free software; you can redistribute it and/or modify it under the terms of the GNU General Public License as published by the Free Software Foundation, either version 2 of the License, or (at your option) any later version.

For example, if you distribute copies of such a program, whether printed or for free, you must make sure that the recipient can get the source code. You must also make sure that the recipient can get the source code.

We protect your rights with two steps: (1) copyright the software, and (2) offer you this License which gives you legal permission to copy, distribute and modify the software.

Also, for each author's protection and ours, we want to make certain that everyone understands that there is no warranty for this free program. If we receive notices from various users that are claiming to have lost their rights to the program, we will not be held liable for such claims.

Finally, any free program is threatened constantly by software patents. We wish to avoid the danger that redistributors of a free program will accidently infringe a patent that someone has obtained against the program. If you receive such a patent, you must make sure that the patent must be licensed for everyone's free use or not licensed at all.

Preamble

The licenses for most software are designed to take away your freedom of resale and reuse. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to guarantee your freedom to share and change free software. You, the public, are the best judge of what good you wish to see from GNU. We therefore request that you prominently display this license on all GNU software.

GNU's General Public License is intended to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of free software (and charge for that service if you wish), that you receive source code or can get it if you wish, that you can change the software or use pieces of it in new free programs; and that you know you can do these things.

To protect your rights, we need to make restrictions that forbid anyone to deny you these rights or to ask you to surrender the rights. These restrictions translate to certain responsibilities for you if you distribute copies of the software, or if you modify it:

For example, if you distribute copies of such a program, whether printed or for free, you must make sure that the recipient can get the source code. You must also make sure that the recipient can get the source code. You must also make sure that the recipient can get the source code.

We protect your rights with two steps: (1) copyright the software, and (2) offer you this License which gives you legal permission to copy, distribute and modify the software.

Also, for each author's protection and ours, we want to make certain that everyone understands that there is no warranty for this free program. If we receive notices from various users that are claiming to have lost their rights to the program, we will not be held liable for such claims.

Finally, any free program is threatened constantly by software patents. We wish to avoid the danger that redistributors of a free program will accidently infringe a patent that someone has obtained against the program. If you receive such a patent, you must make sure that the patent must be licensed for everyone's free use or not licensed at all.

The program source and conditions for copying, distribution and modification follow.

GNU GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE

TERMS AND CONDITIONS FOR COPYING, DISTRIBUTION AND MODIFICATION

0. This License applies to any program or other work which contains a notice that says "Copyright (C) year name of author" and that the program is licensed under the GNU General Public License. It is also applicable to any program or other work which contains a notice that says "Copyright (C) year name of author" and that the program is licensed under the GNU General Public License.

1. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the Program's source code as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you conspicuously and appropriately publish on each copy an acknowledgment of the copyright holder and of your agreement to this License, and you give any other recipients of the Program a copy of this License along with the Program.

2. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may at your option offer warranty protection in exchange for a fee.

3. You may modify your copy or copies of the Program or any portion of it, thus forming a work based on the Program, and copy and distribute such modifications or works under the terms of Section 1 above, provided that you also meet all of these conditions:

a) You must cause the modified files to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.

b) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part is based on the Program, to be licensed at no charge to all third parties under the terms of this License.

c) If the work is a work normally considered derivative work, you must indicate on the work in a prominent manner that you have changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program, and you must cause the work to carry a notice that states that you changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program, and you must cause the work to carry a notice that states that you changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program.

d) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part is based on the Program, to be licensed at no charge to all third parties under the terms of this License.

e) If the work is a work normally considered derivative work, you must indicate on the work in a prominent manner that you have changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program, and you must cause the work to carry a notice that states that you changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program.

f) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part is based on the Program, to be licensed at no charge to all third parties under the terms of this License.

g) If the work is a work normally considered derivative work, you must indicate on the work in a prominent manner that you have changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program, and you must cause the work to carry a notice that states that you changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program.

h) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part is based on the Program, to be licensed at no charge to all third parties under the terms of this License.

i) If the work is a work normally considered derivative work, you must indicate on the work in a prominent manner that you have changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program, and you must cause the work to carry a notice that states that you changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program.

j) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part is based on the Program, to be licensed at no charge to all third parties under the terms of this License.

k) If the work is a work normally considered derivative work, you must indicate on the work in a prominent manner that you have changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program, and you must cause the work to carry a notice that states that you changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program.

l) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part is based on the Program, to be licensed at no charge to all third parties under the terms of this License.

m) If the work is a work normally considered derivative work, you must indicate on the work in a prominent manner that you have changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program, and you must cause the work to carry a notice that states that you changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program.

n) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part is based on the Program, to be licensed at no charge to all third parties under the terms of this License.

o) If the work is a work normally considered derivative work, you must indicate on the work in a prominent manner that you have changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program, and you must cause the work to carry a notice that states that you changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program.

p) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part is based on the Program, to be licensed at no charge to all third parties under the terms of this License.

q) If the work is a work normally considered derivative work, you must indicate on the work in a prominent manner that you have changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program, and you must cause the work to carry a notice that states that you changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program.

r) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part is based on the Program, to be licensed at no charge to all third parties under the terms of this License.

s) If the work is a work normally considered derivative work, you must indicate on the work in a prominent manner that you have changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program, and you must cause the work to carry a notice that states that you changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program.

t) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part is based on the Program, to be licensed at no charge to all third parties under the terms of this License.

u) If the work is a work normally considered derivative work, you must indicate on the work in a prominent manner that you have changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program, and you must cause the work to carry a notice that states that you changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program.

v) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part is based on the Program, to be licensed at no charge to all third parties under the terms of this License.

w) If the work is a work normally considered derivative work, you must indicate on the work in a prominent manner that you have changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program, and you must cause the work to carry a notice that states that you changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program.

x) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part is based on the Program, to be licensed at no charge to all third parties under the terms of this License.

y) If the work is a work normally considered derivative work, you must indicate on the work in a prominent manner that you have changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program, and you must cause the work to carry a notice that states that you changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program.

z) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part is based on the Program, to be licensed at no charge to all third parties under the terms of this License.

aa) If the work is a work normally considered derivative work, you must indicate on the work in a prominent manner that you have changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program, and you must cause the work to carry a notice that states that you changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program.

ab) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part is based on the Program, to be licensed at no charge to all third parties under the terms of this License.

ac) If the work is a work normally considered derivative work, you must indicate on the work in a prominent manner that you have changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program, and you must cause the work to carry a notice that states that you changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program.

ad) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part is based on the Program, to be licensed at no charge to all third parties under the terms of this License.

ae) If the work is a work normally considered derivative work, you must indicate on the work in a prominent manner that you have changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program, and you must cause the work to carry a notice that states that you changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program.

af) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part is based on the Program, to be licensed at no charge to all third parties under the terms of this License.

ag) If the work is a work normally considered derivative work, you must indicate on the work in a prominent manner that you have changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program, and you must cause the work to carry a notice that states that you changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program.

ah) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part is based on the Program, to be licensed at no charge to all third parties under the terms of this License.

ai) If the work is a work normally considered derivative work, you must indicate on the work in a prominent manner that you have changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program, and you must cause the work to carry a notice that states that you changed the work and, if you wish, that you received part of the material from the Program.

aj) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part is based on the Program, to be licensed at no charge to all third parties under the terms of this License.

GNU GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE
Version 2, June 1991
Copyright (C) 1989, 1991 Free Software Foundation, Inc.
59 Temple Place, Suite 330, Boston, MA 02111-1307 USA
Everyone is permitted to copy and distribute verbatim copies of this license document, but changing it is not allowed.

Preamble
The licenses for most software are designed to take away your freedom to share and change it. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to guarantee your freedom to share and change free software to make sure the software is free for all its users. The General Public License applies to most of the Free Software Foundation's software, and to any other program whose authors commit to using the License. (Some other Free Software Foundation software is licensed under different licenses; you should look for a notice if you have one of those programs.)

When you speak of free software, you are referring to freedom, not price. The General Public License is designed to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of free software (and charge for this service if you wish), that you receive the source code of any free software you use, that you can modify it, that you can distribute copies of it, and that you can do these things in the future.

To protect your rights, we need to make restrictions that forbid patents to restrict your rights to use the software or your ability to distribute copies of the software, or to modify it.

For example, if the distribution copies of the software are made available for a fee, you must give the recipients all the rights that you have. You must make sure that they, too, receive or can get the source code. And you must make sure that they know how to exercise their rights.

We protect your rights with two steps: (1) copyright the software, and
(2) offer you this License, which gives you legal protection to copy, distribute, and modify the software. For the software to be under this License, its copyright must be with me or my immediate superior or my superior, and you agree that you and any other person who receives the software from you are bound by this License.

Also, for each author's protection and ours, we want to make certain statements about the copyright notice for each copy of the software. If the software is modified by someone else and passed on, we want it to be clear who is responsible for the modifications. We want to be able to contact you if you have any questions about the software. You must make a statement about the copyright notice for each copy of the software. You must make a statement about the copyright notice for each copy of the software.

Finally, we want to make it easy to share information about software licenses. We want to make it easy to see the complete list of software licenses. To protect this, we have made it clear that any copyright notice for software must be included for everyone's use at least as follows:

GNU GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE
TERMS AND CONDITIONS FOR COPYING, DISTRIBUTION AND MODIFICATION

0. This License applies to any program or other work which contains a notice placed by the copyright holder stating it may be distributed under the terms of this General Public License. The "Program" below refers to any such program or other work which is licensed under this License. Each time you redistribute the Program in any form, whether as print or as machine-readable form, you must add on the part that states that you are redistributing it under the terms of this License and that you have not modified it. Each license is addressed to "you".

Activities other than copying, distribution and modification are not covered by this License; they are outside its scope. The act of running the Program is not restricted, and the output from the Program is covered only if its contents constitute a work based on the Program.
Copies of the Program must be kept under the terms of the License.
Notice that the license is for the Program, not for any particular copy of it.

1. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the Program's source code as you see fit, provided that you copy, distribute and modify it in the future. You may charge a fee for copying and distribution of the program. You may charge a fee for services you provide, such as arranging for the copying and distribution of the program. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set a price for the transfer of a copy.

2. You may modify your copy or copies of the Program or any portion of it, under the terms of this License, and copy and distribute the modified version under the terms of this License. You may charge a fee for copying and distribution of the program. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set a price for the transfer of a copy.

a) You must cause the modified files to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.
b) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part is derived from the Program, to be licensed under the same license as the original work. You may charge a fee for copying and distribution of the program. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set a price for the transfer of a copy.

c) If the modified program normally runs on a computer, it must interact with the user in the same way as the original program.
d) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part is derived from the Program, to be licensed under the same license as the original work. You may charge a fee for copying and distribution of the program. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set a price for the transfer of a copy.

3. You may copy and distribute the Program (or a work based on it), under section 2, in object code or executable form under the terms of section 1, provided that you also do one of the following:

a) Accompany it with the complete corresponding machine-readable source code, in any form, and you must accompany each copy of the source code with a copy of the License. You may charge a fee for copying and distribution of the program. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set a price for the transfer of a copy.

b) Accompany it with a written offer, valid for at least three years, to provide the complete corresponding machine-readable source code, in any form, and you must accompany each copy of the source code with a copy of the License. You may charge a fee for copying and distribution of the program. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set a price for the transfer of a copy.

c) Accompany it with the information you received as to the offer to provide complete corresponding machine-readable source code. This information is to be placed in a prominent location in the program documentation. You may charge a fee for copying and distribution of the program. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set a price for the transfer of a copy.

The source code for a work means the preferred form of the work for making modifications to it. For an executable work, complete source code means the complete source code for all modules used in the work plus all the source code for any libraries or subroutines which are used or invoked by the modules in the work. The source code for a work which includes compiled code must include the source code for the compilation and execution of the compiled code, as well as the source code for any libraries or subroutines which are used or invoked by the modules in the work.

4. The source code for a work must be accompanied by a copy of the License. You may charge a fee for copying and distribution of the program. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set a price for the transfer of a copy.

5. If you distribute the Program or a work based on it, you must also distribute a copy of the License. You may charge a fee for copying and distribution of the program. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set a price for the transfer of a copy.

6. Each time you redistribute the Program (or any work based on the Program), you must also make a copy of the License available to every recipient of the Program. You may charge a fee for copying and distribution of the program. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set a price for the transfer
of a copy.

7. If, as a consequence of a court judgment or allegation of patent infringement or for any other reason (not limited to patent infringement), you are unable to comply with any of the conditions of this License, you may still comply with the conditions of this License in other respects. You may charge a fee for copying and distribution of the program. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set a price for the transfer
of a copy.

8. If the distribution and/or use of the Program is restricted in certain countries either by patents or by copyright law, the copyright owner, or you, may add additional geographic distribution limitations in this License. You may charge a fee for copying and distribution of the program. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set a price for the transfer of a copy.

9. The Free Software Foundation may publish revised and/or new versions of the License from time to time. Such new versions will be published in a prominent location in the program documentation.
You may charge a fee for copying and distribution of the program.
You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy,
and you may set a price for the transfer of a copy.

10. If you wish to incorporate parts of the Program into other programs, you may do so under the terms of this License, provided you follow the conditions below. For example, you may combine the Program with other programs under the terms of this License, or you may combine the Program with other programs under a different license, provided you follow the conditions below. You may charge a fee for copying and distribution of the program. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set a price for the transfer of a copy.

11. In the absence of any other arrangement, you are permitted to combine the Program with other programs under the terms of this License, provided you follow the conditions below. You may charge a fee for copying and distribution of the program. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set a price for the transfer of a copy.

12. If you combine the Program with other programs under the terms of this License, you must make it clear that any copyright notices for the other programs remain. You may charge a fee for copying and distribution of the program. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set a price for the transfer
of a copy.

13. If you combine the Program with other programs under the terms of this License, you must make it clear that any copyright notices for the other programs remain. You may charge a fee for copying and distribution of the program. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set a price for the transfer
of a copy.

14. If you combine the Program with other programs under the terms of this License, you must make it clear that any copyright notices for the other programs remain. You may charge a fee for copying and distribution of the program. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set a price for the transfer
of a copy.

15. If you combine the Program with other programs under the terms of this License, you must make it clear that any copyright notices for the other programs remain. You may charge a fee for copying and distribution of the program. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set a price for the transfer
of a copy.

16. If you combine the Program with other programs under the terms of this License, you must make it clear that any copyright notices for the other programs remain. You may charge a fee for copying and distribution of the program. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set a price for the transfer
of a copy.

17. If you combine the Program with other programs under the terms of this License, you must make it clear that any copyright notices for the other programs remain. You may charge a fee for copying and distribution of the program. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set a price for the transfer
of a copy.

18. If you combine the Program with other programs under the terms of this License, you must make it clear that any copyright notices for the other programs remain. You may charge a fee for copying and distribution of the program. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set a price for the transfer
of a copy.

19. If you combine the Program with other programs under the terms of this License, you must make it clear that any copyright notices for the other programs remain. You may charge a fee for copying and distribution of the program. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set a price for the transfer
of a copy.

20. If you combine the Program with other programs under the terms of this License, you must make it clear that any copyright notices for the other programs remain. You may charge a fee for copying and distribution of the program. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set a price for the transfer
of a copy.

21. If you combine the Program with other programs under the terms of this License, you must make it clear that any copyright notices for the other programs remain. You may charge a fee for copying and distribution of the program. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set a price for the transfer
of a copy.

22. If you combine the Program with other programs under the terms
of this License, you must make it clear that any copyright notices infringement or for any other reason (not limited to patent issues), conditions are imposed on you (whether by court order, agreement or otherwise) that restrict the availability of this License, do not distribute the Program as you are permitted to do under this License, or you are unable to exercise the rights granted to you under this License, you may, as a last resort, distribute the Program as you are permitted to do under this License, provided that you do not do so in a way that is intended to circumvent the restrictions imposed on you by the court order, agreement or otherwise.

If you are unable to exercise the rights granted to you under this License, you may, as a last resort, distribute the Program as you are permitted to do under this License, provided that you do not do so in a way that is intended to circumvent the restrictions imposed on you by the court order, agreement or otherwise.

If any portion of this section is held invalid or unenforceable under applicable law, the balance of this section is intended to survive and the entire section shall be reformed to give the maximum effect to the law.

It is not the intent of this section to infringe any patent or other property right claim or to contest validity of any such claim. The purpose of this section is to ensure that the rights granted by the Free Software Foundation, which is authorized by public license practices, may be exercised by you without restriction. Many people have made contributions to the code base of software distributed through this system of reliance on consistent application of law. It is in the public interest to ensure that the rights granted by this system are not restricted by the actions of a few individuals who are not acting in good faith and whose actions would be to restrict the rights granted by this system.

This section is intended to make clear that what is believed to be a subsequent act of the law of this License.

8. If the distribution under the Program is restricted in certain countries either by patent or by copyright law, the copyright holder or the distributor of the Program shall make every effort to ensure that the Program is available in those countries on a non-exclusive basis, and shall make every effort to ensure that the Program is available in those countries on a non-exclusive basis, and shall make every effort to ensure that the Program is available in those countries on a non-exclusive basis.

9. The Free Software Foundation has public review and control of the General Public License from time to time. Such review shall address new problems or concerns.

Each version is given a distinguished version number. If the Program specifies a version number of this License which applies to it and "any later version", you have the option of following the terms and conditions which are published in the version number specified by the Program. If the Program does not specify a version number of this License, you may choose any version ever published by the Free Software Foundation.

10. If you wish to incorporate parts of the Program into other free software, you may do so. You may also distribute copies of the Program as you wish. For software which is copyrighted by the Free Software Foundation, write to the Free Software Foundation to request permission. For software which is not copyrighted by the Free Software Foundation, write to the copyright holder. For software which is copyrighted by the Free Software Foundation, you may also distribute copies of the Program as you wish. For software which is not copyrighted by the Free Software Foundation, write to the copyright holder.

GNU GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE

Version 2, June 1991

Copyright (C) 1989, 1991 Free Software Foundation, Inc.

Everyone is permitted to copy and distribute verbatim copies of this License document, but changing it is not allowed.

Preamble

The licenses for most software are designed to make sure you, the user, can do what you wish with the software. For example, the GNU General Public License is intended to make sure the software is free for all its users. This license, however, is intended to make sure the software is free for all its users. This license, however, is intended to make sure the software is free for all its users.

When we speak of free software, we are referring to freedom, not price. Our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of free software (and charge for them if you wish), that you can change the software or use pieces of it in new free programs, and that you know who you can ask for help if you need it.

To protect your rights, we need to make restrictions that forbid anyone to deny you these rights or to ask you to surrender the rights. These restrictions translate to certain responsibilities for you if you distribute copies of the software, or if you modify it.

For example, if you distribute copies of such a program, whether gratis or for a fee, you must make sure that the recipients also receive the source code. You must also make sure that you give them the right to copy the source code. And you must show them how to remove their own copyright notices.

We protect your rights with two steps: (1) copyright the software, and (2) offer you this License which gives you legal permission to copy, distribute and/or modify the software.

Also, for each author's protection and ours, we want to make certain that everyone understands that there is no warranty for this free software. If the software is modified by someone else and passed on, we would like you to make sure you state that the original author is not responsible for the problems introduced by others who do not reflect on the original author's responsibilities.

Finally, our free program is threatened constantly by software patents. We wish to avoid the danger that restrictions of a free program will be imposed by a patent holder. To avoid this, we have made it clear that if you modify the program and your modifications are covered by a patent, you must make your patent holder aware of the program and its modifications, and you must make your patent holder aware of the program and its modifications.

The precise terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification are given in the sections below.

GNU GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE

TERMS AND CONDITIONS FOR COPYING, DISTRIBUTION AND MODIFICATION

0. This License applies to any program or other work which contains a notice placed by the copyright holder stating it may be distributed under the terms of this General Public License. The Program is a copy or a derivative work under copyright law: that is to say, a work which is based on the original work or on a translation, adaptation, arrangement, reorganization, or other form of the work, or a collection of such works, in any medium or form.

1. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the Program's source code as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you preserve the copyright notice and this list of conditions in all distributions; that you make available to anyone receiving a copy of this License and to the recipient a copy of this License along with the Program.

2. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set a price for your sale of warranty protection in exchange for a fee.

3. You may modify your copy or copies of the Program or any portion of it, thus forming a work based on the Program, and copy and distribute such modifications or works under the terms of Section 1 above, provided that you also meet all of these conditions:

a) You must cause the modified files to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.

b) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part contains or is derived from the Program or any part thereof, to be licensed under the terms of this License or a later version of it, subject to the provisions of this License to anyone receiving a copy of this License and to the recipient a copy of this License along with the Program.

c) If the modified program normally reads commands interactively whenever it is run, you must cause the start-up process to print a message that states that it was modified by you and that you have changed the program in some way, and that you have changed the program in some way, and that you have changed the program in some way.

d) You must cause the start-up process to print a message that states that it was modified by you and that you have changed the program in some way, and that you have changed the program in some way.

e) You must cause the start-up process to print a message that states that it was modified by you and that you have changed the program in some way, and that you have changed the program in some way.

f) You must cause the start-up process to print a message that states that it was modified by you and that you have changed the program in some way, and that you have changed the program in some way.

g) You must cause the start-up process to print a message that states that it was modified by you and that you have changed the program in some way, and that you have changed the program in some way.

h) You must cause the start-up process to print a message that states that it was modified by you and that you have changed the program in some way, and that you have changed the program in some way.

4. You may copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you preserve the copyright notice and this list of conditions in all distributions; that you make available to anyone receiving a copy of this License and to the recipient a copy of this License along with the Program.

5. You are not required to accept this License, since you have not modified the Program. However, if you do modify the Program, you must make your modifications available to the recipients of the Program as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you preserve the copyright notice and this list of conditions in all distributions; that you make available to anyone receiving a copy of this License and to the recipient a copy of this License along with the Program.

6. Each time you redistribute the Program (or any work based on the Program), the recipient automatically receives a license from the original author to copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you preserve the copyright notice and this list of conditions in all distributions; that you make available to anyone receiving a copy of this License and to the recipient a copy of this License along with the Program.

7. It is not the intent of this License to restrict the rights of the recipient to copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you preserve the copyright notice and this list of conditions in all distributions; that you make available to anyone receiving a copy of this License and to the recipient a copy of this License along with the Program.

8. Each time you redistribute the Program (or any work based on the Program), the recipient automatically receives a license from the original author to copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you preserve the copyright notice and this list of conditions in all distributions; that you make available to anyone receiving a copy of this License and to the recipient a copy of this License along with the Program.

9. It is not the intent of this License to restrict the rights of the recipient to copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you preserve the copyright notice and this list of conditions in all distributions; that you make available to anyone receiving a copy of this License and to the recipient a copy of this License along with the Program.

10. Each time you redistribute the Program (or any work based on the Program), the recipient automatically receives a license from the original author to copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you preserve the copyright notice and this list of conditions in all distributions; that you make available to anyone receiving a copy of this License and to the recipient a copy of this License along with the Program.

11. It is not the intent of this License to restrict the rights of the recipient to copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you preserve the copyright notice and this list of conditions in all distributions; that you make available to anyone receiving a copy of this License and to the recipient a copy of this License along with the Program.

12. Each time you redistribute the Program (or any work based on the Program), the recipient automatically receives a license from the original author to copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you preserve the copyright notice and this list of conditions in all distributions; that you make available to anyone receiving a copy of this License and to the recipient a copy of this License along with the Program.

13. It is not the intent of this License to restrict the rights of the recipient to copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you preserve the copyright notice and this list of conditions in all distributions; that you make available to anyone receiving a copy of this License and to the recipient a copy of this License along with the Program.

14. Each time you redistribute the Program (or any work based on the Program), the recipient automatically receives a license from the original author to copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you preserve the copyright notice and this list of conditions in all distributions; that you make available to anyone receiving a copy of this License and to the recipient a copy of this License along with the Program.

15. It is not the intent of this License to restrict the rights of the recipient to copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you preserve the copyright notice and this list of conditions in all distributions; that you make available to anyone receiving a copy of this License and to the recipient a copy of this License along with the Program.

16. Each time you redistribute the Program (or any work based on the Program), the recipient automatically receives a license from the original author to copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you preserve the copyright notice and this list of conditions in all distributions; that you make available to anyone receiving a copy of this License and to the recipient a copy of this License along with the Program.

It is not the purpose of this section to induce you to confine any aspect of other property right claims or to constrain activity of any integrity of the free software distribution system, which is intended to be a permanent feature of the system. Free software must be distributed by public license arrangements. Free software must be distributed through that system in accordance with the terms of the license that governs its distribution. The authorship or ownership of or the author's willingness to distribute software through any other system and a license cannot change that choice.

This section is intended to make thoroughly clear what is believed to be a consequence of the rest of this license.

8. If the distribution and/or use of the Program is restricted in any way by copyright, patent, trademark, or other intellectual property rights, the recipient of the Program shall be responsible for obtaining any necessary permissions, licenses, or other arrangements from the copyright owner, patent holder, trademark holder, or other rights holder. In such case, this license incorporates the limitation as if written in the body of this license.

9. The Free Software Foundation may publish revised and/or new versions of the General Public License from time to time. Such new versions will be published in the same form as the version 2.0 license and may address new problems or concerns.

10. Each version of the license is given a distinguishing version number. If the Program specifies a version number of this license which applies to it and you wish to combine the Program with other free software, you may choose to use the license which has the lowest version number of the license. If the Program does not specify a version number of this license, you may choose any version ever published by the Free Software Foundation.

11. If you wish to incorporate parts of the Program into other free programs whose distribution conditions are different, write to the author to ask for permission. For software which is copyrighted by the Free Software Foundation, write to the Free Software Foundation; for software which is not copyrighted, write to the copyright holder. Your permission should be granted on the basis of the general principles of this license, and in particular, you should not be asked to pay for such permission. For software which is copyrighted by the Free Software Foundation, you may request to be added to the maintainers list for one of its programs or to receive acknowledgment in the form of a mailing list or other means of software generally.

12. NO WARRANTY

13. BECAUSE THE PROGRAM IS LICENSED FREE OF CHARGE, THERE IS NO WARRANTY FOR THE PROGRAM, TO THE EXTENT PERMITTED BY APPLICABLE LAW. EXCEPT WHERE SHOWN OTHERWISE IN WRITING, THE COPYRIGHT HOLDERS AND OTHER PARTIES PROVIDING THE PROGRAM AS IS, WITHOUT WARRANTY OF ANY KIND, EITHER EXPRESSED OR IMPLIED, INCLUDING, BUT NOT LIMITED TO, THE IMPLIED WARRANTIES OF MERCHANTABILITY AND FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE. THE ENTIRE RISK AS TO THE QUALITY AND PERFORMANCE OF THE PROGRAM IS WITH YOU. SHOULD THE PROGRAM PROVE DEFECTIVE, YOU ASSUME THE COST OF ALL NECESSARY SERVICING, REPAIR OR CORRECTION.

14. IN NO EVENT SHALL THE COPYRIGHT HOLDER OR ANY OTHER PARTY BE LIABLE TO ANY PARTY FOR DIRECT, INDIRECT, OR CONSEQUENTIAL DAMAGES ARISING OUT OF THE USE OF THE PROGRAM, INCLUDING BUT NOT LIMITED TO, PROCUREMENT OF SUBSTITUTE GOODS OR SERVICES; LOSS OF USE, DATA, OR PROFITS; OR BUSINESS INTERRUPTION; OR ANY OTHER DAMAGES THAT MAY BE CLAIMED BY YOU OR YOUR EMPLOYER OR ANY OTHER PARTY AS A RESULT OF THE PROGRAM OR THIS LICENSE, EVEN IF YOU HAVE BEEN ADVISED OF THE POSSIBILITY OF SUCH DAMAGES.

END OF TERMS AND CONDITIONS

How to Apply These Terms to Your New Programs

If you develop a new program, and you want it to be of the greatest possible benefit to the public, the best way to achieve this is to make it free software which everyone can redistribute and change under these terms.

To do so, attach the following notices to the program. It is safest to attach the notices to the start of the source files to most programs. To protect your users, attach the notices to the start of the source files to most programs. To protect your users, attach the notices to the start of the source files to most programs.

Line 1: to give the program's name and a brief idea of what it does.
Copyright (C) 1989, name of author(s)

This program is free software; you can redistribute it and/or modify it under the terms of the GNU General Public License as published by the Free Software Foundation; either version 2 of the license, or (at your option) any later version.

This program is distributed in the hope that it will be useful, but WITHOUT ANY WARRANTY; without even the implied warranty of MERCHANTABILITY or FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE. See the GNU General Public License for more details.

You should have received a copy of the GNU General Public License along with this program; if not, write to the Free Software Foundation, Inc., 59 Temple Place, Suite 330, Boston, MA 02111-1307 USA

Also add information on how to contact you by electronic and paper mail.

If the program is interactive, make it output a short notice like this when it starts in an interactive mode.

Copyright notice of Copyright (C) year, name of author
Copyright notice with ADDITIONAL WARRANTY: For draft type "how-w" this is free software, and you are welcome to redistribute it under certain conditions; type "how-c" for details.

The appropriate command "how-w" and "how-c" should show the appropriate parts of the General Public License. If the command you use is not called something other than "how-w" and "how-c", they could seem to be instructions or menu items instead of help program.

You should also get your employer (if you work as a programmer) or your school, if any, to agree to "copyright disclaimer" for the program, if necessary. Here is a sample; alter the name:

Program, Inc. hereby disclaims all copyright interest in the program "Connection" (which makes passes at computers) written by James Hacker.

Copyright (C) 1989, J. H. Hacker
J. H. Hacker, President of Inc.

This General Public License does not permit incorporating your program into proprietary systems. If your program is a subpackage of a larger program, use the library, if this is what you want to do, use the GNU Library General Public License instead of this license. Use the GNU Library General Public License instead of this license. Use the GNU Library General Public License instead of this license.

This software was previously distributed under BSD/GPL. It dual license terms that allowed either of these license distributions to be selected. As of February 15, 2012, the project has chosen to use only the BSD license with the advertisement clause removed. As such, the BSD, or the GPL, is no longer used. It should be noted that the license terms of the GPL are not compatible with the terms of the BSD license, and vice versa.

Some of the files may still include pointers to GPL version 2 license terms. However, such copyright and license notices are maintained only for informational purposes and are not enforceable. If you are using this software, you should refer to the README file for more information.

GNU LESSER GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE

Version 3, February 1999

Copyright (C) 1989, 1991 Free Software Foundation, Inc.
51 Franklin St, Fifth Floor, Boston, MA 02110-1301 USA
Everyone is permitted to copy and distribute verbatim copies of this license document.

[This is the first preferred version of the Lesser GPL. It also counts as the Library Public License, version 3, hence the version number 2.1.]

Preamble

The licenses for most software are designed to take away your freedom to share and modify it. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to guarantee your freedom to share and modify software under the terms of the GNU General Public License.

This license, the Lesser General Public License, applies to some software packages. It is intended to give users the freedom to share the software with others and to modify and improve it. It is intended to encourage people to use the software in the service of their community and the public, in particular to support the efforts of the Free Software Foundation and other non-profit organizations that promote the freedom of the user to control the technology that he or she uses.

When you speak of free software, you are referring to freedom of use, not price. Our objectives are primarily to protect the rights of free software users, not to dictate terms of sale. You can sell anything you like under our license, and no one can stop you from doing so. You can also charge money for counseling, warranty, or other services, and your fee can be as high as you wish.

Some people use the term "copyleft" to refer to this license.
The term "copyleft" is a play on the word "copyright". It refers to the fact that the license is intended to be perpetual, and that the license is intended to be copylefted, meaning that the license is intended to be copied and distributed under the same terms.

We protect your rights with two simple methods: (1) we copyright the program, and (2) we offer you this license, which gives you legal permission to copy, distribute and/or modify the program.

To protect your rights, we want to make it very clear that there is no warranty for the free software. Also, if the software is modified, the modified version must be distributed under the same terms as the original version. You are not required to give your name to the recipients of the program, but you must give them the full text of this license.

Finally, software patents pose a constant threat to the existence of any free program. We wish to make sure that a company cannot effectively restrict the users of a free program by obtaining patents. Therefore, we have included a provision in the license that prohibits anyone from patenting any software that is distributed under the terms of this license.

Most GNU software, including the libraries, is covered by the GNU General Public License. This license, the GNU Lesser General Public License, applies to certain designated libraries, and is also different from the ordinary GNU General Public License. We use this license for certain libraries in order to permit linking those libraries into non-free programs.

When a program is linked with a library, whether statically or using a shared library, the combination of the two is legally speaking a combined work, derivative of the original library. The ordinary GNU General Public License would require that the entire combination be distributed under the terms of the license. The Lesser General Public License permits linking to other programs without releasing the whole into the public domain.

We want to protect the user's freedom from the ordinary GNU
General Public License. It also provides other free software developers the freedom to choose the terms of their own software.
The Lesser General Public License is a more liberal license for those who want to use their software in a non-free program.

When you link a library with a program, you can distribute the program as a separate file. This is allowed under the Lesser General Public License. You must still give the recipients of the program the full text of this license, but you do not have to give them the library code.

In other cases, permission to use a particular library in non-free programs is granted by the copyright holder. Some libraries are available under the Lesser General Public License. You can use these libraries in your programs without releasing your program under the Lesser General Public License.

Although the Lesser General Public License is less restrictive of the license terms, it does have some restrictions. You must distribute the program with the library, and you must distribute the program with a copy of the Lesser General Public License.

The precise terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification follow. By clicking on the button, you agree to the terms of the Lesser General Public License. If you do not agree to the terms of the Lesser General Public License, you must not use the program.

GNU LESSER GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE
TERMS AND CONDITIONS FOR COPYING, DISTRIBUTION AND MODIFICATION

0. This License Agreement applies to any software library or other program which contains a notice placed by the copyright holder or other authorized party in a file or document stating that it is licensed under the terms of the Lesser General Public License.
Each library is addressed as "this library".

A "library" means a collection of software functions and data organized as a file or as a set of files, which are linked together to form a program.

The "library" refers to the code that is linked to the program.
It does not include the program itself, or any other code that is not part of the library.

Activities other than copying, distribution and modification are not covered by this License. They are outside its scope. The act of copying the program to another location, or the act of installing the program on a computer, is not covered by this License. It is the responsibility of the user to ensure that the program is used in a manner consistent with the intent of the license.

1. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the library's complete source code as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you conspicuously and appropriately publish on each copy an acknowledgment of the copyright holder for the library, and also include this license and terms of copying. You may also distribute a copy of the library in object code form, provided that you also distribute the complete source code for the library.

2. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may at your option offer warranty protection in exchange for a fee.

3. You may modify your copy or copies of the library or any portion of it, to suit your copying and distribution requirements, and you may place additional restrictions on the copies you so distribute, provided that you also meet all of these conditions:

a) The modified work must itself be a software library.
b) You must cause the files modified to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.
c) You must cause the modified files to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.
d) If you are making any changes which are not covered by this license, you must make them available to others under a license that is at least as liberal as the Lesser General Public License.

4. In the event you decide to distribute the modified work, you must also distribute the complete source code for the library under the terms of this license. You may charge for the distribution of the source code, but you must make the source code available to others under a license that is at least as liberal as the Lesser General Public License.

5. You may not copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the library or any portion of it under any other terms which are not consistent with the Lesser General Public License. Anyone who attempts to do so in violation of this license will be responsible for any damages sustained by the copyright holder of the library.

6. This license is intended to be a replacement for the GNU General Public License. It is intended to be used in preference to the GNU General Public License. It is intended to be used in preference to the GNU General Public License.
It is intended to be used in preference to the GNU General
